Levee Blown Up to Save New Orleans

1 DEAD AS ARENA PLANT BURSTS

VICTIM OF AMMONIA FUMES RESCUED BUT DIES IN HOSPITAL

One man is dead and two others are dying as the result of the huge ammonia plant bursting today at the Boston Arena.

DEAD

DYING

James J. Meehan, married, reamer, No. 12 Greenmount street, Dorchester.

Gilbert Jones, ladderman of Ladder 12; home, No. 6 Millett street, Dorchester.

The fireman, wearing a gas mask that choked up with the ammonia fumes filling the Arena, almost lost his life in rescuing Engineer Sullivan, dangling unconscious from the top of a 40-foot ladder.

Meehan staggered out of the ammonia room in a dazed condition and collapsed on reaching the outer air.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL.

All three men were raced to the City Hospital in ambulances, while hospital physicians worked frantically over them on the trip.

The Arena ice plant, one of the largest in this section, was undergoing repairs when first came a leak and then a bursting.

Meehan was working with an acetylene torch, repairing packing in a pipe line that carries the ammonia to an accumulator.

While he was so employed, Engineer Sullivan detected a leak and a drip from a pipe forty feet up in the two-story ceilinged room and running parallel with the second-story windows.

AMMONIA PIPE BURSTS.

Climbing up a forty-foot ladder, Engineer Sullivan was inspecting the leak, when, because of pressure or

EDWARDS HURLS FOR TRIBE AGAINST GIANTS

Polo Grounds, New York, N. Y., April 29.—McGraw sent Hugh McQuillan against the Braves in the second game of the series in an attempt to keep the Giants in the league lead.

Foster Edwards, the Braves right-hander, pitched for Boston, this being his second attempt against the Giants at the Polo Grounds this year. Eddie Moore was at third base in place of Andy High. He was added in order to give the Braves more hitting strength.

Gray Slew for Cash, Says Ruth's Lawyer

Long Island City, N. Y., April 29.—A "mercenary monster, who slew for money."

This was the characterization of Henry Judd Gray today by counsel for Mrs. Ruth Snyder, accused with Gray of slaying her husband.

"A cool, dominating, deadly, inhuman woman—a malicious character."

Such was the designation pinned upon Mrs. Snyder by counsel for Gray in the battle of "co-love-mates" gone to war in a desperate battle, each to escape death in the electric chair.

Mrs. Josephine Brown, mother of Mrs. Snyder, was one of the first defence witnesses, and in a small, quavering voice that indicated only too plainly the emotion stirring her, she told of having warned her daughter against Gray's visits at the Snyder house.

LEVEE IS DYNAMITED TO SAVE NEW ORLEANS

Checks for Red Cross relief for the flood sufferers should be made payable to the American Red Cross and should be mailed to the Boston Metropolitan Chapter at No. 45 Newbury street.

Poydras, La., April 29.—The Poydras crevasse on the East bank of the Mississippi, twelve miles below New Orleans, was blasted at 5:17 P. M., o'clock today in a supreme attempt to break the back of the valley's most devastating flood in history.

On the Mississippi Levee, Near Violet, La., April 29 (A.P.)—Some five thousand residents of the St. Bernard and Plaquemine Parishes were safely in New Orleans today when the military authorities reported that the area affected by the decision to cut the Mississippi River levee at Poydras had been evacuated.

While fifteen hundred pounds of dynamite arrived at Poydras for the blast which will open a crevasse, Baton Rouge reported that water

SACCO AND VANZETTI WRITE TO GOVERNOR

A lengthy message from Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti to Governor Fuller, and written by Vanzetti in his cell in the Dedham jail, was today prepared for presentation to the Governor.

At the Sacco defense committee headquarters it was announced the message would be placed before the Governor probably late today.

The message, it was announced, does not contain any plea for clemency or commutation of the death sentence which now hangs over the two radicals who were convicted of murdering a South Braintree paymaster and his guard, over seven years ago.

Both Sacco and Vanzetti have refused point blank, to ask for anything from Governor Fuller.

They insist they are innocent men, and feel that to ask for clemency would be an admission of guilt. Atty. William G. Thompson, counsel for the doomed men, and Herbert Ehrmann of the defense committee,

MRS. SNYDER WEEPS AS SHE TAKES STAND; TWO WOMEN FAINT IN RUSH

Long Island City, N. Y., April 29.—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, her blue-green eyes flashing defiance, took the witness stand in her own defence at 2:25 p. m. this afternoon.

Dressed in black, Mrs. Snyder walked swiftly around the jury box and to the stand when the court clerk called: "Ruth Snyder."

At one point in her testimony Mrs. Snyder broke down and sobbed; at another she openly snarled at Gray.

The spectators, who a few minutes before had almost provoked a riot trying to get into the courtroom, craned their necks

BISHOP LAWRENCE TO QUIT POST TOMORROW

By Associated Press.

Bishop William Lawrence will retire from his office as bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Massachusetts tomorrow.

The responsibilities of the diocese will fall automatically upon Bishop Coadjutor Charles Lewis Slattery.

Bishop Lawrence recently forwarded his resignation, because of advancing years, to the presiding bishop, John Gardner Murray, bishop of Maryland.

The bishop planned, he said, to announce his retirement at the diocesan convention in Boston next Wednesday.

The retiring bishop will continue

A Distinct Innovation
IN SHOE MERCHANDISING

IN THE future all NETTLETON shoes will be marked with a little symbol on the sole to indicate the method employed in making them.

Modern practice has made it possible to produce shoes which look so much alike, although radically different inside, that even experts find it difficult to readily determine just how some of them are made.

We are heartily in accord with this system of identification now being rapidly adopted in the shoe industry in which there is a symbol for each type of shoe as follows:

GOODYEAR WELT — GOODYEAR TURNED — McKAY SEWED — LITTLE-WAY — STITCH DOWN

We believe that the purchaser has a right to know how the shoe is made. NETTLETON shoes are all made by the Goodyear Welt process and will therefore have the welt symbol stamped in the shank of each shoe.

It is placed there in order that all may tell at a glance just how the shoe is made.

Firemen Defy Death ~ At Arena Blast ~ Shut Off Deadly Fumes

LEADS WAY TO PERIL

Andrew Larsen, hatless, who led the way for Rescue Crew No. 1 of the fire department in shutting off ammonia fumes after fatal bursting of pipe at the Boston Arena in St. Botolph street, between Massachusetts avenue and Gainsborough street, Back Bay.

HERO OF DARING RESCUE

Gilbert Jones of Ladder 12, one of the three victims of deadly fumes, ere he was overcome rescued Patrick F. Sullivan, who died later in City Hospital.

GAS MASK CREW AT WORK IN FUMES

Donning masks to shut out the deadly ammonia, these men formed in line and, led by Larsen, strode into the Arena building to locate the shut-off by which the fumes were conquered. Several were nearly overcome as the suffocating gas seeped through the masks, but all recovered quickly when they returned to the open air after accomplishing their daring task.

Soc, the mother fumbled aimlessly with her glasses as she admitted not having told Snyder of Gray's visits.

Her warning to her daughter, she said, came after the first two or three visits by Gray.

While the two attorneys—Edgar F. Hazelton for Mrs. Snyder, and Samuel L. Miller for the defeated Gray—drove home the pointards of their oratory in each other's accused clients, and twisted the shafts in the jagged wounds, hundreds of men and women battled police inside and outside the courthouse, attempting to rush an entrance and hear "the own stories" of Mrs. Snyder and Gray.

Buttons were ripped from policemen's uniforms, one assistant to the District Attorney lost his watch to a time-grasping gentleman and women's finery was torn and bedraggled.

Court Is Jammed

Within the courtroom itself the throng stood six deep about the walls and even in front of the door, refusing to move even at threats by officers.

It was the largest crowd ever collected at a Long Island court that hung to each word in breathless silence as Attorney Hazleton turned this blonde defendant as the tragic victim of "the deceiving monster who entered her home and stole her love and murdered her husband."

And the crowd still listened with spell-bound interest as Attorney Miller painted Gray as a man "driven to tragedy by an act not his own, dominated by a will not his own, controlled by a brain not his own, and powerless to struggle against a super-power."

Each of the defendants was the innocent, helpless victim of the other, according to the attorneys.

Eager to Hear Ruth

Hazleton, his collar unloosened in his frenzy, and bearing all the appearances of an inebriated comedian, took one hour and sixteen minutes for his opening statement. Miller talked for only eleven minutes.

When the attorneys were finished, the crowd waited breathlessly for Mrs. Snyder to take the stand and tell her story.

They were doomed to temporary disappointment, however.

Two insurance agents were called by Hazleton to substantiate his statement that Mrs. Snyder attempted to cancel the insurance policies of her husband.

Pointing an accusing finger at the erect-fallen figure of Henry Judd Gray, Hazleton held the guilt for the murder of Albert Snyder to him.

The attorney said that Mrs. Snyder not only did not desire the death of her husband but had repeatedly attempted to dissuade Gray from committing the crime.

He charged that Gray's sole motive was to collect the insurance of Snyder.

He said that Gray, alone, plotted the murder of Snyder and perpetrated it while Mrs. Snyder looked on in horror.

He admitted that Mrs. Snyder and Gray had been on friendly terms, but declared that she was charged with murder and not a violation of the social code.

Gray to Take Stand

Atty. Miller, a bit more calmly, read his remarks.

He said Gray's confession was obtained under duress.

Gray, he said, was not of rational mind and was "hopelessly intoxicated" at the time of the crime and was "dominated by a will not his own." Said the attorney:

"He struggled against that driving power, but without avail.

"He had no motive for crime, nor any intent. He was dominated by a cool, dominating, deadly, inhuman woman. He was in the abyss, driven by this malicious character.

"Gray will go on the stand and will tell his own story."

The Snyder defence has as one formidable weapon the testimony of little Lorraine Snyder. She will be brought forward to tell of the unhappiness of life in the Snyder home; to testify that her mother was a "good mother."

It was anticipated that District Attorney Newcombe would not submit Lorraine to a cross-examination. She is only nine.

Ruth's Counsel Lashes Gray as a "Mercenary Monster"

Long Island City, N. Y., April 27 (A.P.).—Attorney Edgar F. Hazleton, chief counsel for Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, today charged that Henry Judd Gray was the sole instigator of the Albert Snyder murder in his opening address to the jury hearing the case on trial in Superior court here.

"First we will show you," said Atty. Hazelton in launching his address, "that the defendant Snyder married her husband when she was very young and after Snyder's first fiancee had died. He did not forget that first woman. He even named his boat for her, the "Jessie Gerhardt."

"Only three months after the marriage he repulsed Ruth Snyder and said that if his first sweetheart had lived, he would never have married this defendant.

"Man Without Any Love"

"Bickering started, but she remained faithful and bore that most child to try to bring back love into that house.

"But the father was the incompatible pal of the defendant, and the

RUTH LIKE A 'BOSS' AT HER TRIAL, NOT A CULPRIT

Long Island City, N. Y., April 29 (A.P.).—With the announcement that Mrs. Ruth Snyder would take the stand in her own defense, the courtroom at the Snyder murder trial was packed like a rush-hour subway car by 9 o'clock today.

Mrs. Ruth Snyder has been the big target for curious eyes ever since the trial began a week ago last Monday.

IN LATEST STYLE.

She is above the average height for a woman, and of large frame. Squarely built and lithe of movement, she strides to her seat as each session opens rather as though she was there in some directing capacity than as a defendant accused of an atrocious murder.

She is 32 years old, has bronze bobbed hair and a naturally high color. She is dressed in black, outwardly mourning for the husband she is accused of killing, but her garments are in the latest style. Many observers see a bit of irony in this outward display of grief.

SHE BOSSES TRIAL.

A knee-length dress reveals sheer silk stockings and dainty slippers. Her hat is of the latest sport variety, a close-fitting felt with a sloping two-inch brim. And about her neck is a long necklace of black beads that she fingers incessantly.

Mrs. Snyder's most striking feature is her chin, jutting out straight from the throat. The woman has blue eyes and a mobile mouth that constantly forms muttered objections to adverse testimony.

She has taken acute and active interest in the trial's progress, consulting her attorneys constantly and directing their efforts in the fight for her life.

She has provided a striking contrast to her co-defendant and former suitor, Henry Judd Gray, who has slumped despondently in his chair, staring at the floor, apparently oblivious of his surroundings.

"Dip" Gets Watch of Attorney at Snyder Trial

Long Island City, N. Y., April 29.—Another "profession" recognized the Snyder murder trial as "good business" today. Pickpockets were present.

This became known when Asst. Dist. Atty. Charles Frosell suddenly discovered his timepiece was not in his pocket. The crowd was so dense and excited over the prospect of seeing Mrs. Snyder on the witness stand that even an amateur "dip" could have done business.

Arena Fumes Victim Dies After Rescue

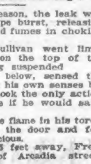
for some other reason, the leak widened and the pipe burst, releasing free ammonia and fumes in choking clouds.

Immediately Sullivan went limp, sagged, caught on the top of the ladder and hung suspended

Meehan, down below, sensed the danger and, with his own senses beginning to reel, took the only action that was feasible if he would save his own life.

Dousing out the flame in his torch he staggered to the door and fell through, unconscious.

Meanwhile, 128 feet away, Frederick Reardon of Arcadia street, Dorchester, signal towerman working on a New Haven Railroad signal, smelled the ammonia, and believing something was wrong at the Arena, attempted to signal to pedestrians on the street to notify the police of Traffic 21, with quarters on the second floor, rear, in the Arena.



Fred Reardon

At the same time, Harry Allan, chief ice maker of the Arena, smelled the fumes in the main section of the auditorium and immediately notified Captain James Laffey of Traffic 21, who telephoned Ladder 15 in Boylston street and Rescue Co. No. 1 in Church street.

When Ladder 15 rolled up to the Arena, Ladderman Jones slipped an army gas mask over his face and went into the ammonia-filled room.

After Jones reached the top of the ladder and had located Sullivan on the pipe line the fumes began to seep through his gas mask.

Tearing off the gas mask, which was more an incumbrance than an aid the plucky fireman carried Sullivan to a window to get some air. Just as they arrived, an explosion occurred and the window was blown out landing them on the floor.

Again Jones sought a way out and this time, staggering and groping his way under the weight of his unconscious burden, he managed to get on a fire escape where he collapsed.

The ammonia kept coming from the accumulator and the fumes were steadily worse when Rescue Company No. 1 arrived at the scene. Lieutenant John J. Williams with Ladderman Hagen, Nelson, Murphy, Donnelly and Mowbray, were helpless, but the rescue company, under the leadership of Andrew Larsen, donned their masks and, forming a line, entered the building to shut off the poisonous fumes.

William Meagher, superintendent of the building, explained to Larsen the location of the main valve and how to reach it by following the pipe line.

The cause of the accident is unknown, but, according to men inimiar with the plant, the ammonia leaked from the accumulator because of worn-out packing.

LAST WARNING GIVEN RESIDENTS WHO FAIL TO QUIT AREA ABOUT TO BE FLOODED

was running over the Glascock levee across the river from Natchez, Miss., on the west side of the stream.

GUARD ON JOB.

With the crack of dawn a detachment of the National Guard marched to the scene selected for the break at Poydras, ten miles south of New Orleans, and spread out fanwise to give a last warning to the few hundred residents of the territory who had failed to heed early admonitions to abandon their homes for safe ground in or near New Orleans.

Careful plans for creating crevasses were prepared by State engineers in consultation with officers of the United States Army Engineers' Corps, but they are jealously guarded for reasons which are not disclosed.

LOOSEN LEVEE.

Word did go out in advance, however, that the break would be one thousand feet long, between the parishes of St. Bernard and Plaquemines and extending northward from a point within a few hundred yards of the plant of the Orange Grove Refinery Company, a large industrial alcohol works.

The purpose was to loosen the massive levee along that stretch by the use of dynamite in many small charges, thus leaving to the force of the floodwaters the completion of the breach which is expected to reduce the level of the water here appoximately three feet in from three to six days.

Extraordinary precautions were taken to prevent accident and insure the safety of all those who might be within the restricted area. Orders issued from the State military district provided that after the engineers' tug had signalled that preparations for the blasting were completed, an interval of fifteen minutes would be allowed for the removal of troops from the danger zone and for a seaplane to ascertain if the area was clear of civilians.

The plane's signal of "all's clear" was three white sheets of paper to be released at short intervals. That, too, was the signal for the firing of the blasts by means of an electric "gun" operated on the State engineers' tug, thus releasing the waters which eventually were expected to inundate about 800 square miles before draining off into the gulf.

FORCED FROM HOMES.

The animation and bustle at Poydras was in marked contrast to the scenes enacted at the concentration camp at the army base here where the several thousand persons forced from their homes in the two southeastern parishes were gathered. Silently from early morn they counted the hours until the flood water would be released to rush across country inundating the homes where their life interest lay, where they long had lived and worked and where they ultimately will return when the waters have receded and the State has repaired the breach made in the levee.

A new area in Mississippi, near Tallulah, Miss., was under Water as a result of the break of a levee on a canal there and the flood was running into the street on the lower end of the little Mississippi city.

Hub Gifts for the Red Cross $74,000

Contributions of over $11,000 received at headquarters of the Boston Chapter of the American Red Cross within the past 24 hours brought total receipts for Mississippi flood sufferers up to more than one third of the $200,000 quota set for the district.

Martial Law Impends Over Mississippi Delta

Memphis, Tenn., April 29 (U.N.E.A.).—With martial law impending over the Mississippi delta due to threatening epidemics, hundreds of motorboats today continued their missions of mercy for thousands still marooned in flooded areas of Mississippi and Arkansas.

Greenville, Miss., today ordered all negroes to move their home onto the levee to bring about better sanitary conditions.

Twenty thousand additional acres of farmlands were flooded today as the result of a break in the Yazoo River levee near Kinkaid plantation, twelve miles below Vasco City. Another thousand acres near Shreveport, La., was flooded by a break in the Louisiana Navigation Company embankment.

Reports from Lake Village, Ark., said that 1,500 people there were without drinking water following the failure of the water works.

Ruth of the Steadfast Love of Bible Day ~ Ruth the Ruthless as She Plots to Slay

"ONE TENDER AND LOVING AND OH, SO TRUE!"

Ruth and Naomi—"And Ruth said: 'Entreat me not to leave thee; or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: Thy people shall be my people, and thy god my god,'" (Ruth 1, 16) After the picture by Philip H. Calderon, R. A., in the Walker Art Gallery, Liverpool.

"ONE LIKE THE FURIES OF THE INFERNO UNLEASHED"

Ruth and Gray—"And Ruth begged: 'Aw, his insurance is $50,000. I've tried to kill him, but I need help. You know I love you, sweetie.' And she had me in a whirl. I bought the chloroform and weight and we beat him. But she delivered the death blow and she helped tie him and washed off the blood."—(Gray's confession). Drawing by Staff Artist Kolliker.

POLICE KNOW MAYBELLE MATHESON'S SLAYER

KILLED HER IN MISTAKE FOR ANOTHER

It was a married man that killed Maybelle Matheson in the fog-hung West Roxbury field, police asserted today as they endeavored to learn through another, an Arlington man the whereabouts of the slayer.

The Arlington man, taken as a "suspicious person," was released, however, after questioning at police headquarters, during which he denied steadfastly that he knew the new murder suspect.

The police say they believe the married man, whose identity, but not whereabouts, is known to them, killed Maybelle possibly in mistaking her for another girl with whom he had engaged in a love quarrel.

Lest he, himself, become wary and flee and few other girl acquaintances recognize characteristics or descriptions and warn him, the police will not give the slightest inkling of the suspect's identity or habits until they have their fingers twisting in his sleeve, they said today.

STOCKHOLDERS IN BANK LIABLE FOR $1,000,000

Stockholders in the defunct Tremont Trust Company must pay more than $1,000,000 as their share of the liabilities, according to a decree today ordered by Judge Braley of the Supreme Court.

The stockholders' assessments date from March 1, 1922, and they must pay interest at 6 per cent. Former Governor Eugene N. Foss, who owned 1,000 shares, is understood to have made settlement of his liability, which would be $100,000.

Benjamin H. Swig, former treasurer, is liable for $248,790.25; Samuel C. Mintz, $78,600; Frederic A. Juniskey, $66,986; Louis M. Krasno, Simon J. Dangel and Harry B. Farrell, $65,000 each.

Among the many other stockholders, who are liable, are former Governor John L. Bates, $16,375; Fred J. Burrell, former State Treasurer, $6,801, and Bernard W. Marcus, $26,980.

GENERAL NEWS SECTION

ALIENISTS SAY MRS. STEVENS IS SANE

A partial victory was won today by Mrs. Alice R. Stevens, fighting in Middlesex Probate Court for the right to handle her fortune herself, when two alienists appointed by the court declared her sane.

Recently released from the McLean Hospital for the Insane at Waverley, Mrs. Stevens, a 53-year-old Belmont widow, is opposed by her aged mother and her sister in her struggle to oust her legal guardian, Charles W. Bissett, husband of the sister.

Following a summation by her attorney, Walter E. Brownell, in which the lawyer scathingly rebuked the sister as "the cunning master mind in this affair," Judge Harris took the case under advisement for decision later.

"No evidence of insanity" was reported by Dr. Harry H. Coleman and Dr. Edward B. Lane, and both added they considered Mrs. Stevens capable of handling her own affairs. Dr. Coleman told of recommending her for observation last October, when she had hallucinations and fears and talked of dead bodies in her house. On another occasion he said he found evidences of much drinking.

"Your Honor, Mrs. Stevens has paid the penalty of drinking liquor. Now, reputable alienists find she is capable of handling her own affairs and I request that the guardianship be discontinued."

Declared Sane

Mrs. Alice R. Stevens, Belmont widow, is opposed by her 82-year-old mother and her sister in her court fight to have her brother-in-law removed as her guardian and court alienists report in her favor.

SISTERS TREAD ALTAR TRAIL TOGETHER

Sisters and brothers will figure in a Lynn wedding tomorrow night when Miriam and Anabel Hart, daughters of a former State representative, are married to Lynn men.

The sisters have gone to school together, were graduated last year from Boston University and tomorrow night will tread the altar trail together. Miriam will marry George S. Hammer, Jr. Annabel will will wed Richard G. Veale. Brothers of each groom will be best men, while the brides' older sister, Mrs. Arthur W. Trefy, will be matron of honor.

The couples will be married in the Boston Street M. E. Church by Rev. Maurice Bullock, the pastor. A double ring service will be used. Former school chums will attend the girls.

FILLING STATION AND CAFETERIA ARE BURNED

Fire today destroyed the filling station and cafeteria known as "White Court" on the Boston-Lowell highway at Wilmington, scarring the gas tanks but failing to reach the gasoline supply stored underground. The buildings, which were a total loss, were owned by Anthony Del Torto of Wilmington. Firemen called to the scene, which is near Silver Lake, were helpless, there being no water supply for fire fighting in that vicinity.

FULLER'S FALSE ALARM!

IN VERY ACT!

But none of that was anywhere nearly as serious as it sounds for the State's chief executive was merely testing the new fire alarm system at State House. Here he is in the east wing of the Capitol sounding the alarm.

GRAY ON STAND TO TELL HOW 'VAMPIRE' MADE HIM KILL

'MOST AWFUL STORY MAN EVER HEARD' PROMISED JURY

child annoyed him. Bickering grew worse and worse. He was a good provider, but love was not in his heart.

"Mrs. Snyder, however, though she may have gone out with men, morally was faithful until she met Henry Judd Gray, who found her a fit tool for his nefarious plans."

Hazleton said Gray "showered affection such as she had never known" on Mrs. Snyder, and she "inevitably gave way."

"They became as friendly," he said, "as any two beings can be. But this woman is not being tried for that.

"It was Judd Gray who first mentioned insurance and advised Mrs. Snyder that her husband ought to be covered. Snyder had recently had two automobile accidents. Mrs. Snyder spoke to her husband and he said to get the insurance man.

"There was no concealment. Snyder knew what he was doing and instructed his wife to have the policies taken out. The premiums were paid from a joint account, so there could have been no secret.

"After the premiums had been paid, they decided together that the financial burden was too great. She went to the insurance company twice to see about cancellation, and was advised that she could not withdraw her premiums for three years.

Gray Borrowed Money

"So the Snyders let it stand. And that is the proof that Mrs. Snyder never had a secret insurance motive to kill her husband."

In the meantime, Hazleton said, Judd Gray was borrowing hundreds of dollars from her, never to repay it.

"We will show you," he shouted, "that Judd Gray was the motivating personality behind all this, that he was continually broke and planned to get money by whatever means."

Hazleton then took up the reports of previous attempts on Snyder's life before he was finally murdered.

"Why, you know how accidents happen," he said. "When a gas tube came loose and endangered Snyder Mrs. Snyder wrote Judd Gray and he wrote back: 'You ought to get a long tube and put it under the governor's nose.' He called Snyder the governor.

"It was Gray, with his eye on that insurance, who pressed her to get rid of the governor and threatened to kill both her and himself if she did not take her husband's life.

Powders for Governor

"On March 5 they met and he gave her a package which he said contained a reducing 'hi roller,' she had wanted.

"When she got home and opened the bundle there was the sashweight.

"Gray, following his nefarious plan, had enclosed a letter in the bundle in which he said he was coming on March 7 to 'get the governor.' 'Put this weight under the pillow in ther's room,' he wrote, a. m., immediately after Edgar F. Hazleton, attorney for Mrs. Snyder, had made her opening statement.

Miller told the jury that "the defendant Gray" will take the stand and "present to you the most tragic story that has ever gripped human hearts—a story of the human triangle of secret love and dishonor—the most appalling that ever befell to man to submit to in a court of justice."

"Third Degreed"

Miller talked for only eleven minutes. He said that there was nothing the defence wished in this case more than "the naked truth."

He said he would prove the confession obtained by the authorities from Gray was obtained by duress, compulsion, threat and force.

"There will be presented to you evidence that the defendant was not and could not have been of rational mind at the time this alleged crime is alleged to have been committed," Miller told the jury.

"We will show that he was hopelessly intoxicated, that the mind of the defendant never conceived, never realized, never comprehended what his hands were doing.

"In Her Power"

"We will prove that the defendant was driven into this tragedy by an act not his own, dominated by a will not his own, controlled by a brain not his own, commanded by a brain not his own, and powerless to struggle against that controlling super-power, which was gripping him and driving and directing his energies and his faculties."

Miller said Gray struggled to loosen himself from this domination and from the catastrophe it was leading him into, but without avail.

Insurance Men Called as Snyder Witnesses

Long Island City, N. Y., April 29.—Harry Hide, an insurance man, was called as the first defence witness today in the Snyder murder case by Edgar F. Hazleton, attorney for Mrs. Snyder, although it had been announced that Mrs. Snyder would be the first on the stand.

Hide was manager of the Jamaica office of the company that insured Snyder.

His testimony was perfunctory.

John Kaier, Jr., manager of a branch insurance office at Richmond Hill and formerly employed at the Jamaica office, was next on the stand.

He remembered Mrs. Snyder when she applied for her husband's insurance. The defense failed in an attempt to have him read from the policies that Snyder had the right to change the beneficiary.

The court sustained State objection, ruling that as the policies were in evidence, the jury would see all parts of them.

Sylvester S. May, a newspaperman from Brooklyn, who said he had known Gray fifteen years, next took the stand.

He told of getting a telegram from Gray two days before the killing. He obeyed its instructions by calling Mrs. Snyder and telling her to watch for a letter. That was a letter Hazelton mentioned in his opening address to the jury, which set the night of March 19 for the killing.

Mother, Near Tears, Says She Warned Ruth Against Gray

Long Island City, N. Y., April 29.—Mrs. Josephine Brown, mother of Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, was called as a witness for the defense in the Snyder murder trial today.

Questioned by Hazleton she said she had lived with her daughter for the seven years preceding Snyder's death.

"Do you know Henry Judd Gray?"

"Yes."

"He came to the house?"

"She begged and pleaded and cried. She got him downstairs. He had a revolver in his hand and threatened her.

"She ran upstairs, and while she was in the bathroom she heard a heavy thud. She rushed out and there she saw Judd Gray strangling the prostrate form of Albert Snyder and beating him to death.

"She tried to drag Gray off, but he pushed her and she fell, fainting away.

"When she came to the dead was done, and the bloody print of Gray's hand where he had pushed her was on her breast."

Hazleton said Gray then told the woman that she must help in the robbery alibi "because they were both in it now and the blood on her gown would convict her."

He planned the alibi and then revealed that the insurance was his motive. When she knew at last that not love of her, but only love of money had actuated him, she became horrified and did blindly what she was bid.

"For she knew then that she was in the power of a mercenary monster."

"About three times, on business only."

"So you were told?"

"So I was told. I bought a corset from him."

Mrs. Brown spoke in a clear, even voice, but did not look at her daughter.

WARNED OF GRAY

"What happened after the third time Gray called?"

"I told Ruth, 'Don't let him come any more.'"

"You were away from the Snyder home the night of the killing?"

"I was."

"After your daughter was arrested did you ask to see her?"

"I did, but they wouldn't let me."

"When?"

"The district attorney."

(By William Millard for Gray.)

"When Gray called at the Snyder home did you tell him about your daughter's troubles with her husband?"

"They were not mentioned."

"Was Albert Snyder ever present when Gray was there?"

"No."

(By the District Attorney):

NEAR TO TEARS

"Didn't you call up your daughter March 19 and tell her you could return that night?"

"I told her I was not needed where I was if she needed me, but I would be late and if she didn't mind I'd stay where I was."

"But you could have returned?"

"Yes, at about 9 o'clock at night."

Mrs. Brown at this point was fighting to control her emotions and keep from weeping.

"Why did you tell Mrs. Snyder not to let Gray come any more?"

"I didn't think it looked right."

"Did you ever tell Albert Snyder Gray had been there?"

"No."

Court was then recessed for lunch.

Reporter Tells of Night Club Parties With Gray

Long Island City, N. Y., April 28.—The first witness of the afternoon session at the Snyder murder trial today was S. S. May, a Brooklyn reporter.

May said he was a friend of Gray's and knew Mrs. Snyder for two years. He accompanied Mrs. Snyder and Gray to night clubs at various times.

He was accompanied by a "Miss Duncan."

"Did Mrs. Snyder drink heavily at the night clubs?"

"No," replied May.

He was asked how many drinks Gray took the last time he was out and replied "about a half-dozen."

Hazleton showed May a copy of a telegram May had received from Judd Gray and read it.

"Please call Nonnie if possible and tell her to watch out for a large letter mailed Wednesday.

(Signed) "BUD."

Judd Will Bare His 'Love Shame' for His Life

Long Island City, N. Y., April 29 (I.N.S.).—Henry Judd Gray will take the witness stand in his own defense, his attorney, Samuel L. Miller, declared today in his opening address to the jury.

Gray is being tried with Mrs. Ruth Snyder for the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder.

Miller started his opening at 11:26 a. m., immediately after Edgar F. Hazleton, attorney for Mrs. Snyder,

DR. MAGRATH IS POISONED

Dr. George Burgess Magrath, Boston's veteran medical examiner and murder expert, is again fighting the ravages of septic blood poisoning, it became known today.

He was admitted to the Phillips House, Massachusetts General Hospital, on Wednesday. Hospital officials declined to comment on his condition. For several years Dr. Magrath has been afflicted with septic blood poisoning in the left hand, received in June, 1923, while performing an autopsy.

Two months afterward he began a seven-week fight to save the hand, spurning a suggestion that the amputation of the hand would cause quick recovery.

REFUSE CONFIRMATION TO TEN CONSTABLES

As a result of charges made against them, 10 constables were refused confirmation of appointment at a hearing before a City Council committee today. More than 60 constables were given a hearing on re-appointment. Charges that they were gunmen, bullies and bad check passers were denied. Robert Gardner Wilson, Jr., heads the committee.

$100,000 FIRE IN MELROSE

Sweeping through the Eastman Block, Nos. 525-533 Main street, Melrose, fire caused $100,000 damage and threatened the entire business section today. One fireman was overcome and carried down a ladder three stories to the ground.

A general alarm brought aid from Malden and Wakefield. The building is of wooden construction and the flames raced through the second floor to the third, where a furniture store room blocked firemen's efforts to cut off the blaze.

Windows into the furniture store room were barred and firemen worked for an hour before they could gain entrance. While directing a hose line through a window on the top floor Lieutenant William Russell of Engine 1 was overcome and his companions carried him down the ladder to safety. He was treated by a doctor on the scene.

The fire is believed to have started on the second floor. An overturned candle in the Willis G. Smith optical shop ignited a mass of inflammable material, according to police. In a few minutes the entire building was on fire and occupants of offices and ground floor stores had to rush to safety.

MRS. SNYDER SOBS AS SHE TELLS HER OWN STORY ON THE STAND

BARES SECRET ROMANCE WITH JUDD GRAY; DENIES CRIME

and impressive silence fell over the room. Two women who fainted during the rush for the doors were carried downstairs and into an emergency room.

Mrs. Snyder's face was very pale. She spoke in a well-modulated voice.

Justice Townsend Scudder, presiding, told her sh did not have to testify, as if she did she would be subjected to cross-examination.

Attorney Edgar F. Hasleton f he counsel at once began to question her.

Q.—Where were you born? A.—New York City.

Q.—Where were you educated? A.—In a public school in New York. I also went to a business sch ol.

Q.—Where was your first job? A.—With the New York Telephone Company.

She said she later obtained a secretarial job at the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Q.—You met your husband there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you hold a job after that? A.—Yes, with the Wood Company.

Q.—How long did you know your husband before you married him? A.—Three or four months.

Q.—Were you ever operated upon? A.—Yes, for appendicitis when I was a child.

She testified that she and her husband first went to Brooklyn to live for three years. There, their baby, Lorraine, was born.

Later, they went to the Bronx. Finally they moved to Queen's Village.

Q.—Did you know Jessie G rshart? A.—No; my husband spoke of her.

Q.—She died before your husband married you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did your husband have a bost? A.—Yes; he named it the "Jessie G."

Q.—Did he change the name of the boat? A.—When we were married a month he called it the "Ruth."

Q.—Did he have pictures of Jessie? A.—Yes, an album full of pictures of her.

The jury of married men watched the slim, black feminine figure with intense interest.

Q.—Did you have disputes after the baby was born? A.—Yes, frequently. He found fault because she wasn't a boy. We quarreled for weeks over the child.

She testified Lorraine was born in April, 1917.

Mrs. Snyder In Tears

Mrs. Snyder here broke down and wept.

Q.—Did you do your own housework? A.—Yes, I did everything; made baby clothes, my own clothes, draperies, curtains and everything that went with the house.

Q.—You were unfaithful to your marriage vows with Henry Judd Gray? A.—Yes.

Mrs. Snyder said she met Gray two years ago this July in Henri's restaurant in New York.

Q.—Did you go away for a vacation that year? A.—Yes, to Shelter Island with my husband and mother.

Hasleton asked Mrs. Snyder if her daughter Lorraine attended Sunday school, and the witness replied affirmatively.

Q.—Did you teach her hymns? A.—Yes.

Mrs. Snyder was talking very low and it was even difficult to hear her through the radio amplifiers.

Justice Scudder asked her to raise her voice.

Q.—When you went to the night clubs with Gray, did you partake of liquor?

A.—Very little—perhaps a drink or two. I would try to make what I got last all night.

Q.—Did you ever drink in excess? A.—Never.

Q.—Did you ever smoke? A.—No.

Wore Girl's Pin

She testified that her husband used to wear a pin with the initials "J. G." on it.

Q.—Was that the pin, the one Police Commissioner McLaughlin put before you when you confessed? A.—Yes.

Hazleton brought out that the pin was a [illegible] the property of Jessie Gershart, her husband's former sweetheart.

Henry Judd Gray, the co-defendant, did not even look at Mrs. Snyder as she was testifying. He sat, with head bowed in his hands, a figure of dejection, his eyes on the floor.

Mrs. Snyder related that the Snyders had a bungalow at Port Jefferson, where Snyder was fond of boating, swimming and fishing.

Q.—Did Gray ever visit the bungalow? A.—No.

Hazelton asked the witness if her husband ever took her to shows and she replied negatively.

Q.—Did you take a trip with Gray last Fall? A.—Yes. I told my husband I was with a girl friend.

Q.—Did Gray ever give you any presents? A.—A hand bag and a garnet.

Q.—Did he ever borrow money from you? A.—About a year ago he borrowed $200. He told me he wanted to pay a debt to Alice, a girl he knew in Buffalo.

Never Paid Money Back

Q.—Was he going with Alice then? A.—He said not.

Later, Mrs. Snyder testified she gave Gray $90 for his car and once when they were on a trip he ran short and she gave him some more money. She said he had promised to pay it back, but he never did.

She said Gray once told her that he was insured for about $30,000 and asked her how much insurance her husband had.

She told him $1,000. She testified that she had been after her husband for years to take out more insurance because he had a couple of accidents in his garage while he was tinkering with his automobile.

She admitted she had taken up the question of insurance with Agent Ashefield. It has been brought out in testimony that Snyder was finally insured for $50,000, double indemnity.

Agreed to Keep Policy

She said her husband earned $115 a week and that they had a joint bank account.

Hazleton showed her some checkbooks. Hasleton offered the checkbooks in evidence.

Attorneys for the State delayed proceeding for a few minutes while they examined the checkbooks. The checkbooks were issued by the Queens Bellaire Bank, where the joint account was kept. The books were admitted as evidence.

Witness then testified that she and her husband talked about premiums and he thought the insurance should be reduced.

She consulted the insurance people, she said, and they urged her to stick it out. She told her husband, she said, and he replied that as long as they had gone that far that they might as well keep it up.

Q.—Were the premiums always paid by you from the common account? A.—Yes.

Didn't Plan to Elope

Q.—Did Gray ever say anything about getting rid of your husband? A.—Yes.

Q.—When? A.—He began early this year.

Q.—What did he do? A.—He sent me some poison and said that would be an easy way to do it.

Q.—You remember any occasions when a gas tube became disconnected and your husband was almost killed? A.—Yes. I wrote Gray about it.

Q.—What did he write back? A.—He wrote, "Too damn bad the tube wasn't long enough to stick in his nose."

In testifying this last Mrs. Snyder raised her voice and fairly snarled at the little bowed figure below her. Gray shook his head slightly, but gave no other sign.

Q.—Did Gray ever speak to you about leaving your husband? A.—No.

She denied Gray had ever asked her to elope to Maryland.

Q.—Did you ever tell Gray you would see him no more? A.—Yes, my mother made me.

Q.—What did he reply? A.—He said if I ditched him he would expose me to the world for the kind of a woman I was.

Q.—You continued to go with him after that? A.—Yes.

Mrs. Snyder then told of meeting Gray at a restaurant on March 5, she having asked him to get a fancy whiskey bottle to be used for a lamp and a reducing "hip roller."

She told in detail how an electric light lamp is made from a three-sided whiskey bottle.

Q.—What happened at the restaurant? A.—He hurried away to catch a train, leaving a bundle, which I thought contained the reducer and the bottle.

Q.—When you got home, did you find those articles in the bundle? A.—I did.

Q.—Anything else? A.—Yes, a sash weight about a foot long and weighing about five pounds.

Gray Sent the Poison

Q.—Anything else? A.—A note.

Q.—What did the note say? A.—It said he was coming over to get rid of my husband on March 7 and told me to give him some powders, that were also in the bundle. I threw the powders away and put the weight in the cellar.

Q.—"Did Gray come when he said he would?" A.—"Yes, about 11 at night when my husband was asleep."

Q.—"What did he say?" A.—"He said, 'I've come to finish' the governor; I said 'Judd, you can't do such a thing,' and pushed him out of the house. He said 'Well, if I can't do it now, I'll do it later.'"

Q.—"Did you see him again until the night of the murder?" A.—"No."

Q.—How did you next hear from him? A.—A mutual friend phoned me to watch out for a letter and it was from Judd saying he would be out on the night of March 19. It enclosed some more pwders which he told me to give my husband before he went to a card party that night. He said he would be in the house when we got back and to have the sash weight under y mother's pillow."

She said Gray had wanted her to give the powders to her husband. "I threw them into the sink," she declared.

DEPUTIES NAB GANGSTER WITH MACHINE GUNS

Harrisburg, Ill., April 29 (A.P.)—Charles Birger, gang leader, was rearrested at his home here today by Sheriff James H. Pritchard of Franklin County and eleven deputies, armed with machine guns, and taken to jail at Benton, where a new indictment has been returned against Birger in connection with the murder of Mayor Joe Adams of West City.

The cross-examination of Mrs. Snyder was one of the most gruelling quizzes ever heard in a court.

Those who read her testimony will want to read the cross-examination. Be sure and get your copy of the Boston Evening American tomorrow and read what she says.

MOTOR BLOWS UP ON WARSHIP

Washington, April 29 (A.P.)—An explosion of the electric motor on the airplane carrier Langley at sea today paralyzed all electrical machinery aboard, the Navy Department was informed by radio. There were no casualties in the ship's personnel.

Although the ship was said to be taking water slightly, the dispatch said she was in no danger. After the explosion the vessel anchored half a mile from Ambrose Light. She will be towed to New York for repairs.

The accident occurred at 7 o'clock this morning while the Langley was proceeding with the fleet off New York. A 200 kilowatt genator exploded, carrying away the main injection line, cutting the auxiliary exhaust and steam lines completely.

The Langley is the flagship of the air forces of the fleet. She is commanded by Commander John H. Towers.

LAWRENCE TO RETIRE FROM BISHOPRIC

his duties at the cathedral in this city.

Owing largely to Bishop Lawrence's initiative and organization ability, $6,000,000 was collected as a pension fund in 1916 for Episcopal clergy in the United States and their dependent families.

Born in Boston, May 30, 1850, he became bishop of Massachusetts in 1893, succeeding the late Bishop Brooks. He had served as dean of the Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge.

Bishop Lawrence displayed his energies in many directions. He gathered a fund to aid the poorer parishes in his diocese to obtain rectories. He was instrumental in raising $1,000,000 to increase salaries of teachers at Harvard and also another fund, exceeding a million dollars, for Wellesley College.

OFFERS HYDE PARK PLAN TO SAVE HISTORIC TREES

The question as to whether the city can save about 100 large maple trees, set out in 1876 to commemorate the centenary of American Independence, was discussed today at a City Hall hearing on the widening of River street, Hyde Park. William J. Sullivan, chief engineer of the laying out department, said that if River street residents wished to retain their nine-foot sidewalk and thus sacrifice the roadway, the trees will stand. The River street improvement will cost the city about $300,000.

OFFER CHAPLIN $3,750 A WEEK FOR STAGE JOB

London, April 29 (I.N.S.).—Harry Day, English producer, has cabled Charlie Chaplin an offer of a twenty-week contract to appear on the London stage, guaranteeing him $3,750 a week if he will commence an engagement in September.

Gas Victim's Life Is Saved After 16-Hour Battle

Battling death for 16 hours, doctors and nurses at Haymarket Relief Hospital today won a victory, saving the life of Hugh Flanagan, 65, of Main street, Charlestown, who was overcome by gas.

The work of reviving Flanagan began when he was placed in the ambulance, with police of Charlestown using the prone method of resuscitation. At the hospital the struggle was continued, the doctors, orderlies and nurses working in relays at the task.

Restored to consciousness, the gas victim told who he was, but refused to talk about an attempt at suicide. Police received information that Flanagan has a family in Medford.

SLAYER RESPITE IS DENOUNCED IN LETTER

visited the men in the Dedham jail today and received the message from Vansetti's hands.

The message, closely written with a lead pencil, filled more than a dozen pages of foolscap.

At the office of Atty. Thompson the message was transcribed by a stenographer. Some few slight changes were made in the text and Atty. Thompson then planned to return to Dedham to have the prisoners concur in the changes and sign the typewritten copy.

No intimation of what the message contains will be given out until the original reaches the hands of Governor Fuller.

CASE REVIEWED.

It is understood, however, that the message is much in the nature of a complete review of the entire case from the viewpoint of the condemned men and written with the idea of guiding the Governor in any investigation he may order.

Vanzetti, speaking for himself and Sacco, today refused finally to sign a petition for clemency.

"Mercy is a fine human attribute in its place, but it has no place in this case," he told counsel, "for a request of mercy carries with it a request for forgiveness. What we want is vindication."

CHIDES GOVERNOR.

The first letter criticising Governor Fuller for his action in again reprieving Celestino Madeiros, slayer of a Wrentham bank cashier and a figure in the Sacco-Vanzetti case, reached the Governor's office today.

The letters was from Dr. Joseph L. Taylor, a Boston dentist.

"I am very much disappointed and surprised," the dentist wrote, "to hear of your decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case through the advance information of your disposition of the Madeiros case. I did hope you would show more determination. I realize that there has been a great pressure brought to bear upon you. The precedent that you are starting is a dangerous one."

The Governor's mail regarding the Sacco-Vanzetti case has fallen off sharply. This is believed to be due to the fact that the public generally has taken it for granted that the Governor will in some manner investigate the case of the two radicals before permitting them to go to the electric chair the week of July 10, as directed by the court.

The Rev. Samuel Beals of Sandwich suggests to the Governor that he and his council handle the Sacco-Vanzetti case, with Attorney-General Arthur K. Reading conducting a thorough investigation and advising the Governor and council.

Frank Russell White, a Washington, D. C., architect, wrote the Governor urging the condemned men be granted a new trial. An investigation by a commission is urged by the New Jersey State branch of the Women's Industrial League for Peace and Freedom.

Twenty-five professors and instructors of Clark University, Worcester, sent a petition asking that a disinterested commission be appointed to review the case. A similar request was made by Dr. Vincent Z. Bowditch of No. 595 Beacon street.

An unusual message was received from the Fascist League of North America, with headquarters in New York. The league, although unconditionally opposed to the political beliefs of the prisoners, asks that Massachusetts give the condemned men the utmost opportunity to prove their innocence.

FIND BODY ON BOSTON SHIP

Employes of the steamship New York, in from Gotham to Boston, found in stateroom 9 today the body of an unidentified man about 60 years old.

The body, after an ambulance surgeon had pronounced the man dead, was removed to the North Grove Street Mortuary by Dr. William J. Brickley, associate medical examiner.

The body is that of a man 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighing 165 pounds, of medium complexion with gray hair fringing a bald spot, and a smooth face and prominent nose.

It was clad in a three-piece blue serge suit, light-brown garbardine topcoat, dark-gray soft hat and tan shoes.

A good word one is a friend in need and a friend indeed. See Autos for Sale in the Classified Ads. Classification 156.

VAST RESEARCH DATE FOR N. E. INDUSTRIES

Within a period of months, vital New England industries will have placed before them research facilities and information of a magnitude and completeness hitherto unknown in the history of manufacture.

Manufacturing processes, machinery, distribution and marketing data, style trends and intricacies of consumer demand will be laid before New England manufacturers by a group of experts working under the joint auspices of the New England Council and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York. Final plans for introduction of New England's great "examination of conscience" were made today at a meeting in the office of A. Lincoln Filene, chairman of the research committee of the New England Council.

Present at the meeting were John S. Lawrence, president of the New England Council; Henry Bruere, vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, who made the original offer to put at the disposal of New England industry the research facilities of his organization; Dudley Harmon, vice-president of the New England Council; R. W. Bowdoin, in charge of the research department of that body, and the following experts retained by the insurance company: Arthur Lazarus, distribution and merchandising; W. A. Berdge, economic research; W. S. Barrett, manufacturing methods; L. A. Tofel, research librarian, and Meyer Bloomfield, industrial relations.

THUGS ROB 50 PATRONS IN CHICAGO CAFE HOLDUP

Chicago, April 29 (A.P.).—Seven men, six wearing large blue eyeglasses and all armed, early today held up half a hundred persons in the Wacker Cafe, a cabaret on the lower level of the Wacker Drive, and escaped with loot after one of the robbers had been shot accidentally by a companion.

The robbers were in the cafe half an hour in their systematic search for valuables and the loot in cash and jewelry was placed at several thousand dollars.

One of the robbers was wounded when a companion's shot at a cafe patron missed its mark. The wounded robber was dragged from the place by his companions and all sped away in an automobile.

LINK WALES' NAME WITH PRINCESS BEATRICE

London, April 29 (A.P.).—Rumors that the Prince of Wales is at last about to become engaged have reached London from Seville in sunny Spain, where the name of the heir to the British throne is insistently coupled with that of the Infanta Beatrice, elder daughter of the Spanish sovereigns.

London gossips find significance in the fact the imperial suite at the Claridge has been reserved for King Alfonso and Queen Victoria next month when their daughters and the Spanish Crown Prince, Alfonso, Prince of the Asturias, will accompany them to England.

MRS. VANDERBILT NOT TO ASK FOR ROTA ANNULMENT

Paris, April 29 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II., who is seeking a divorce in the Paris courts, has no intention of asking the Rota tribunal for an annulment of her marriage.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, it was said, has no intention of remarrying and therefore considers a church annulment of her marriage unnecessary. The Vanderbilt divorce action will cost approximately $200,000, lawyers estimated.

Present indications are that Mrs. Vanderbilt entered an action on grounds of t e coldness of his wife, but it is understood this was a formality to aid his wife's action by indicating both parties desired a divorce.

Silent Slayer in Chair

Lincoln, Neb., April 29 (I.N.S.).—Henry Bartlett, silent to the last, died in the electric chair here today for the murder of Asa Ranson, Minden, Neb., marshal. For two weeks prior to his death he had not talked, and he had refused to don clothing, pacing his cell naked.

"A NIGHT AND A DAY" ENDED THIS ROMANCE

Chicago, April 29.—"A night and a day" makes a capital title for the wedded life of pretty Mrs. Florence Heffner, 18, who today is seeking a divorce on grounds of cruelty.

"We lived together one day. That was enough."

It was enough, according to the young bride, to enable her husband to commit five "major acts of cruelty."

ZINMAN SUSPENDED; TRIED TO 'BEAT WALL STREET'

New York, April 29 (A.P.).—The meteoric career of M. Boyd Zinman, one of the youngest members of the New York Stock Exchange, was halted today by a year's suspension for using for his own purpose information obtained in a conversation he overheard between a member and a stock specialist.

Zinman's career typifies the dreams of thousands who try to "beat the market." Only five years out of college, he got his start with a $40,000 fee from a large industrial concern for acting as tax consultant in 1924 and by October, 1925, when he was twenty-nine years old, he was able to purchase a seat on the exchange for $135,000, at that time a record price.

The conversation Zinman is alleged to have overheard concerned a member giving an order to a specialist to sell a certain stock if and when it should reach a certain level. He thereupon is alleged to have purchased the stock for his own account and to have sold it to the member holding the stop order.

AD REVIEW IS GOING STRONG IN 5TH WEEK

The Boston American Prize Review of Current Advertising, now in its fifth week, continues to attract the attention and approval of business men, educators, advertising men, public officials and alert readers throughout New England and beyond.

The purpose of the Review is to encourage the production of more efficient and restful advertising which will bring the most profit to the advertiser and the most interest and helpfulness to the reader.

Heartily endorsing this object, Mr. Bowen Tufts, prominent Boston banker, gave his reasons for his approval as follows:

By BOWEN TUFTS

Of the C. D. Parker Company, Inc., Bankers, Boston

A healthy competition in commercial activities as well as in sports, usually brings out the best that men can produce. The advertising contest that the Boston American is conducting is the kind to bring an awakening of those responsible for the advertising of the firms to even more skilful presentation of the qualities of their products. Such a contest will bring out greater benefits to advertisers than the advantages of the past have been able to produce.

If ten good men should start to run a mile over ten different roads their results would not be as good as though they ran in competition over the same road, not only to beat each other, but to better the record already made. Better results due to this same spirit of competition should be the outcome of the Boston American's Prize Review to the advertisers, especially when the ten cardinal points, emphasized in the contest that make up good advertising, are followed out. Good advertising is good salesmanship.

PICK WINNER SATURDAY.

Those who are following the progress of the competition, are comparing notes in speculation about the winner of the next period of the contest. This winner will be selected from all the advertisements in this evening's paper as well as in every evening's American this week to Saturday, April 30.

The choice of the Board of Judges will be announced in next Wednesday's Boston Evening American.

The members of the Board of Judges appointed by Major P. F. O'Keefe, President of the Advertising Club of Boston are:

ALLEN H. WOOD, president, Wood, Putnam & Wood Company, No. 178 Tremont Street.

GEORGE G. RORKE, district superintendent, Dictaphone Sales Corporation, No. 93 Federal Street.

RALPH E. CONDER, advertising manager, Boston Woven Hose & Rubber Co., Cambridge.

FLOYD L. MILLER, The Barta Press, No. 209 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge.

JACOB S. WICHERT, publicity manager, Mellins Food Company, No. 177 State street.

CISSY FITZGERALD SUED BY DAUGHTER-IN-LAW

Los Angeles, April 29 (A.P.).—Cissy Fitzgerald, popular as a musical comedy actress of some years ago, and now a screen actress, is charged with alienating the affections of her son, Osmund Tucker, from her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Vera Tucker, in a $50,000 suit filed in Superior Court.

Miss Fitzgerald, in private life as Mrs. Cissy Tucker, was charged with taking a dislike to her daughter-in-law, and with forcing the latter's abandonment by her husband. The complaint says the couple married January 26 of this year and that the separation took place last March 15.

CALLES TELLS LABOR HE WILL QUELL DISORDERS

Mexico City, April 29 (A.P.).—President Calles told a group of delegates of the Regional Confederation of Mexican Labor last night that the agitation disturbing the country at present was unimportant and the government considered itself strong enough to quell the disorders and punish the guilty.

Dry Law Cuts Death Rate

Montclair, N. J., April 29 (A.P.).—In his opinion of Professor Irving Fisher of Yale, as expressed in a speech here, prohibition has probably reduced the death rate in this country more than any other one cause.

Two Dead in Plane Crash

Miami, Fla., April 29 (A.P.).—Morris W. Bland, 25, formerly a mechanic for the Florida Airways Corporation, and Ernest Peach of Coral Gables, Fla., were killed in an airplane crash at Hialeah.

Bleak House

By Charles Dickens

WITH Lady Dedlock suspected of the murder of Tulkinghorn, the solicitor, Mr. Bucket, a detective, had to tell Sir Leicester Dedlock the story of his wife's disgrace, so that the evidence against her could be brought up. Bucket believed her innocent of the murder.

LADY DEDLOCK, fearing she would be unable to prove her innocence, and believing Sir Leicester would never forgive her for her deception, wrote a note, acknowledging her guilt of all the charges against her except that of murder, and left the house at night.

BUCKET arrested the French maid, Mlle. Hortense, who confessed she had killed Tulkinghorn and sought to cast the guilt on Lady Dedlock. Sir Leicester declared he would freely forgive his wife; then the shock of the exciting affair brought on a stroke of apoplexy.

ESTHER and Mr. Bucket began a search for Lady Dedlock. They finally found her at the graveyard entrance where Captain Hawdon, the lover of her youth, lay buried. She was clinging to the locked iron gate, dead from grief and exposure.

NEED GRAVES FOR TWO IN TOE-TO-TOE GUN DUEL

New York, April 29 (A.P.) — A dying gangster was under arrest today in the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital charged with murder for his victory in a toe to toe gun duel with a rival gunman.

Timothy "Chuck" Looman, 32, bootlegger and police fighter, dropped dead in front of St. Bernard's Church in West Fourteenth street, the victim of what police regard as an agreement to "shoot it out" with James O'Brien, 23, also known to police as a gangster.

PROCEEDS OF MRS. LYDIG'S BOOK TO BE ATTACHED

New York, April 29 (A.P.)—Creditors of Mrs. Rita De Acosta Lydig hope to realize something from her new book depicting what she terms "the tragic futility of fashionable life." They intend to attach the proceeds. Their lawyer also says he will examine her as to the reports that she is receiving an income of $40,000 a year.

the company buy the stock to increase interest in their work. They had already bought ten millions of the stock.

SECRETARY MELLON, real business man, one of President Coolidge's Mississippi flood problem committee, attacks that problem in the right way.

He would control the Mississippi in the North, impounding "head-waters" during the rainy season, arranging an even flow of water, and a regular supply for power.

Under his plan the old Mississippi, harnessed for hydroelectric power, would be reformed, made harmless, and would pay the cost of its reformation.

A. W. POND, scientific gentleman, back from Africa, says ladies of 150,000 years ago used cosmetics, "extravagant ornaments" and painted their cheeks red.

They went to extremes, wore necklaces made of ostrich eggs, and some of them painted their faces yellow and black, as well as red.

STILL EARLIER, 500,000 years ago, when men used "flat hatchets," long, sharp stones shaped like pickaxes, the ladies, then covered from head to foot with reddish hair, were probably pulling the hair from their cheeks, noticing that gentlemen preferred smooth skin. It has been a long, painful climb to the flapper of today, but worth it.

MR. WRIGLEY, who owns Catalina Island and other things, expects President Coolidge to occupy his country house on Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, this Summer.

The President could not find a more comfortable place or better fishing.

He will find in Mr. Wrigley's house everything a house should have, including electric exercising machinery to save a busy man's time, and nothing that a plain American house should not have.

And in the neighborhood the President will meet men able to discuss intelligently the farm question upon which Mr. Coolidge's mind is now concentrated.

THE TINY SCHOOLHOUSE where Walt Whitman was the seventeen-year-old teacher ninety years ago is to be restored and preserved.

The old school, once red, now gray, stands on the estate where the Prince of Wales was a guest on his recent visit to the United States. Walt Whitman could write something about that.

AN UNFORTUNATE LEPER, John Early, is at large somewhere in the South, having escaped from the Carville (La.) leprosarium.

Men dread to arrest him, but there is little to fear. Soap and water have reduced leprosy to an insignificant disease. And the newest discovery, chaulmoogoa oil, conquers it.

LAST RITES FOR MRS. FILENE

Simple services marked the funeral today of Mrs. William Filene, who died at her home, No. 236 Bay State road, Wednesday. Attended only by immediate members of the family, a few close friends and several officials from the William Filene Sons Company store, the cortege left the Filene home and went to the Forest Hills Crematory Chapel.

Rabbi Charles Fleischer of New York officiated in the chapel service. The ashes will be placed in a niche with those of her husband, Rabbi Fleischer formerly was located in Boston.

The service was of extreme simplicity, consisting of a short address and the reading of a poem entitled "Mother," written by Quincy Kilby of Boston, an old friend of the Filene family.

Quotations from Walt Whitman were read by Rabbi Fleischer. Two grandsons-in-law, George Ladd of Brooklyn and Alfred Dodd of Wasington, were the informal ushers.

Among the mourners present were Sydney Conrad, C. Crawford Holdidge, Ludwig Eiseman and a delegation from the Filene Co-operative Association. Store officials who attended were Edward Frost, only vice-president of the company now in the country—Louis E. Kerstein—being abroad; L. S. Bitner, F. A. Black, A. W. Wright and E. F. Raphael, the last four mentioned being members of the Filene management and operating committee.

Employes of more than 20 years' standing attended in a body as official representatives of the store. They were Elmer M. Fisher, Margaret E. Murray, Mrs. E. J. Stevenson, Miss Essie B. Brown, Mrs. Jessie Wallace and Thomas Lyford.

Mrs. Frost and Mrs. Kirstein also attended.

The Filene store was closed from 10:30 to 11:30 o'clock while services were being conducted.

TOWLE NEVER HEAD OF SPANISH WAR VETS' POST

James Towle, 48, of Chelsea, whose wife went to the police to report him missing and discovered that two warrants were out for him on statutory charges, was never commander of the Walter I. Chadbourne Post, Spanish War Veterans, of Chelsea, according to a statement made today by officers of that post. Towle, it was explained, was formerly a member.

BRITISH COTTON BROKERS MAY REFUSE CREDIT

Liverpool, April 29 (A.P.).—A report was current here today that a movement was on foot for the cotton brokers and merchants to combine and sell raw cotton for cash instead of the usual credit. The contemplated step, it was said, was brought about by abnormal conditions in the cotton industry, withdrawal of loan money from the mills and repeated reference to moratoriums.

MAN OF 72 LAW SUITS FREED

Wayne C. Holsworth, about whom centred no less than 72 court litigations, was today ordered released from the State Hospital at Medfield by Judge Braley of the Supreme Court.

Holsworth landed in the State Hospital after he flourished a revolver in Judge McCoole's court at Dedham during a separate support action by his wife.

Holsworth's mind became unbalanced from the flood of litigation, his counsel claimed. At a hearing Dr. Elisha H. Cohoon, superintendent at the hospital, said Holsworth could safely be at large and that if he went to Buffalo to live with his father his recovery would be hastened. Judge Braley ordered the release.

LADY ASTOR CRIES 'SHAME' AS HOUSE REJECTS BILL

London, April 29 (A.P.)—The House of Commons, to the accompaniment of a cry of "shame" from Lady Astor today rejected a bill which was designed to protect married women from being dismissed or refused jobs by any public authority merely on the ground of their marriage. The vote was 54 to 48. One of the customs the bill would have altered was the dismissal of women school teachers of London upon their marriages. An argument against the measure was that women civil service employes oppose it as it would decrease their opportunity for promotion.

LOOK FOR NEW SALES RECORD

"The influx of orders received by Willys-Overland since the new models were first announced in January continues unabated, with indications that March and April will establish new records for shipments of the same period of past years," Herbert Fitch, New England manager of Willys-Overland, declared today.

"These statements are based on the number of Whippets, Willys-Knights and Whippet Sixes shipped late in March and early this month. The total is better than 80 per cent. increase over the same period in 1926," he continued.

"The general average from January to date shows 16 per cent. more shipments than last year. This percentage is constantly rising, and is a fairly certain indication that Willys-Overland is well along toward reaching the quota set for the current year.

"Our building schedules for all models have been increased materially over the original figures, the flow of orders forcing a speeding-up of production. According to reports from the Willys-Overland dealer organization, this year will stand out as one of the most prosperous in the history of the company."

TIMELY HINTS FOR AUTOISTS

Now that Spring is here and the highways and byways are calling, is your car ready to give 100 per cent. service during the coming touring season?

A check of the following questions prepared by Harry Dunn, general manager of the Boston Oldsmobile Company, and being sent every Oldsmobile owner in the country, will give the answer:

"Has the anti-freeze solution been removed from your radiator and the radiator flushed?

"Have you had the battery checked for proper charge and water level?

"Is the generator charging properly?

"Has the oil in the crankcase been changed to Summer grade?

"Have the transmission and differential lubricants been changed to Summer grades?

"Have the distributor points been checked for proper contact and gap?

"Have body and other bolts been checked to offset disagreeable squeaks and rattles?

"Has the chassis been thoroughly lubricated?

"Have the front wheels been checked to prevent unnecessary wear on tires? (Parking at curbs and striking objects sometimes change the position of wheels.)"

Sending out recommendations for the proper care of Oldsmobiles, similar to the one above, is one of the regular services of the Olds Motor Works to Oldsmobile owners.

DELIVER 230 TRUCKS A DAY

Retail deliveries of Graham Brothers trucks and commercial cars to customers by Dodge Brothers dealers now are averaging more than 230 a day, it was announced today.

This volume of sales practically equals the high average of 1926 when all previous records of the company were broken with a total of 67,292 commercial car and truck deliveries.

Coming well in advance of the peak buying season, it is estimated that the present large sales indicate another record breaking year for Graham Brothers.

For the week ended April 9, a total of 1,217 commercial cars and trucks were sold by dealers in the United States alone compared with 1,174 for the preceding week and 1,103, 937, 920 and 820 respectively for the weeks preceding.

The increased sales reported by this leading truck manufacturer indicate improved business conditions as the Spring season advances if motor truck sales can be taken as a barometer of general business activity.

Students View Nash Car

Inspection of the various operations entailed in the production of the Nash car was made last week by a delegation of fifty students of the Aviation Corps of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station as a part of the school curriculum.

These students express keen interest in the various processes that go to make up the completed car and are outspoken in their admiration at the lengths to which Nash Motors goes in the safe-guarding of quality through their system of inspection and tests.

100 MILLIONTH TIRE IS MADE

"When the hundred-millionth Goodyear tire was produced in April by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company at Akron, Ohio, it marked a manufacturing accomplishment without parallel in the rubber industry," according to Mr. James A. Travers, Goodyear dealer at Boston.

"This achievement is of particular significance to the tire user and car owner," Mr. Travers said, "for into every Goodyear tire goes the experience gained in establishing a world's record in tire production, and the skill of the largest development and engineering organization in the tire business.

"In addition to one hundred million pneumatic tires, Goodyear has produced more than three million solid and cushion tires and thousands of bicycle and carriage tires in the early years of the company's existence.

Beginning in 1898 the Goodyear organization started a line of unbroken developments in tire building which included the first practical cord tire, the pneumatic truck tire, and the company's latest product, a scientifically designed balloon tire which was placed on the market in January of this year after two years of development and road service on the Goodyear test car fleet."

GOVERNOR WILL PLANT MAPLE

Following a custom started when Coolidge was Governor, Governor Fuller tomorrow will observe Arbor Day by planting a cut-leaf maple on the State House lawn beside the walk leading to the east wing.

The executive committee of the Massachusetts Committee on American Forest Week, Harris A. Reynolds, U. M. Carlton, William A. L. Hazeley, Mrs. Myron Davis, Jr., and Frank W. Whitney, will attend.

With the exception of one tree, planted by Governor Cox, all the trees have developed splendidly, and Superintendent of Buildings Fred F. Kimball expects to have a fine showing within a comparatively few years.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Members of Boston Smart Set Are Out to Surpass All Records at Copley Society's Fine Arts Ball Tonight

THE DAY HAS ARRIVED AND THE HOUR FAST APPROACHES. THE DAY AND THE hour of the much anticipated, long prepared for Fine Arts Ball of the Copley Society And "All hail the costume ball," say I. Because it's the one occasion in the social scheme not dependent on feminine adornment alone for decoration. It's the one occasion that affords mere man an opportunity to burst forth in glorified or eccentric raiment, like unto the rain bow in color. The occasion when he is gorgeously in the picture and not merely its background of gleaming broadcloth and spotless fine linen.

TEACHING THE YOUNG idea how to dance is not at all difficult, when represented by such a nimble little lady as is Joyce MacNichol, small daughter of Mrs. Frederick MacNichol of Cambridge and niece of Mrs. Robert Treat Paine. Little Miss MacNichol was a dancer in a recent recital in the University City. As "Peter Pan" she played a merry tune and danced charmingly.

A VERY PICTURESQUE affair of bright crimson and golden yellow satin, the garb of a Turkish gentleman, will be Arnold Hunnewell's contribution to the changing picture. It's the Orient itself, reds and yellows accented further by a turban of bright purple. Barbaric colors these, but perfectly the thing for a costume ball. In Elizabethan costume with flaring neck ruff, Edward R. Warren goes to the Fine Arts Ball.

DISTINCTLY IN CONTRAST TO THE PEACOCK FINERY OF Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, Mr. Burr chose the other extreme and arrays himself penitentially in sackcloth, so to speak. At least, it is burlap, a monk's robe flowing of sleeve and straight of line. The artist, I. M. Gaugengigl, togs himself out in a cleverly arranged costume of ancient origin, something of the 15th century flavor. Captain Guy Napier-Martin is a Polish courtier, brave in red and blue and gold. George Edgell of Cambridge is 15th century, in gold brocade.

MRS. NAPIER-MARTIN, THE FORMER MARY DEXTER, HAS A resplendent costume from a famous Boston costumer. It is a creation of sweeping court lines, designed for Polish royal days. It is of imperial crimson, fur-banded, and sets off marvelously Mrs. Napier-Martin's statuesque height. Mrs. Edward Warren of Chestnut street is an Elizabethan matron, and Mrs. George Edgell of Cambridge is gorgeously arrayed in 15th century gold brocade with royal headdress of pearls.

IMMENSELY INTERESTING TO BOSTONIANS OF THE OLDER regime is the creation Mrs. John Chipman Gray wears. It was originally one of the marvelous gowns belonging to the Empress Eugenie. After adorning that beautiful woman, it passed to the possession of Boston's most famous matron, the late Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, as part of the world-known collection that bore her name. Now Mrs. Gray is to wear this interesting costume, and without doubt it will create a sensation.

B. NASON HAMLIN, SLATED FOR "MASTER OF CEREMONIES" duties at the Fine Arts Ball, will start the affair merrily on its way and then dash (if he can make it) for an early morning train to hear him New York and Baltimore-ward. His trip to the Southern city will bring him to that center of sport just in time to take in the Maryland Hunt Cup race, along with many other prominent Bostonians.

THE ENTIRE LIST OF JUNE brides will have none prettier or bonnier than Miss Rosamond Reed, daughter of Mrs. James Reed. She and William Townsend Snow plight their troth to one another at the hour of noon on June 11, in the Church of the Redeemer out in Chestnut Hill. But one attendant, Miss Marian Morss as honor maid will walk up the aisle with the bride, as arrangement for the wedding are of the simplest. Crocker Snow is best man. After the ceremonial there will be a wedding breakfast at the home of the bride's mother.

An estate of $120,000, willed entirely to his widow, was left by Arthur G. Wood, widely known jeweler of Brookline, who committed suicide in Brookline reservoir on April 3 because of ill health.

The will, disposing of $80,000 in real estate and $40,000 in personal property, was allowed today in Norfolk County Probate Court, where bonds of $225,000 were filed by the executors, Edward A. Bayley of Beverly and John W. Dunlop of Brookline.

FITCHBURG PASTOR DIES OF FALL FROM HORSE

Fitchburg, April 29 (I.N.S.)—Rev. Arthur J. Gammack, rector of Christ Episcopal Church here, and for many years prominent in the Episcopal Church in New England, died today at Greenwich, Ct., from injuries received in a fall from a horse. He was 57 years old.

Rev. Mr. Gammack was visiting at the country estate of William Fain. Before coming to this city, Rev. Mr. Gammack was rector of the fashionable Episcopal Church at Lenox, in the Berkshire Hills.

SWAN BOAT FOR RUTLAND VETS

A 20-foot pond boat of the Public Gardens swan boat type was shipped today to the Veterans' Hospital at Rutland, gift of the Department of Massachusetts, Ladies Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, to the 400 patients there.

With Senator David I. Walsh acting as orator, the formal presentation of the boat will be made Sunday afternoon on the shore of the artificial lake on the hospital grounds.

Popular subscriptions amounting to more than $1,200 paid for the boat and for two live swans for the lake, besides individual May baskets of gifts for all the patients, the campaign being conducted by the ladies auxiliary under the leadership of Senior Vice-Commander Mrs. Ida Cohen. Mrs. Cohen will make the presentation and Department Commander William Hornsbaa will be master of festivities.

The public will be admitted to the presentation ceremony.

GIRLS IDENTIFY 3 SUSPECTS IN ATTACK

Three Worcester men ranging in age from 20 to 35 years are held by the State Police at Framingham, charged with attacking two Worcester girls, aged 13 and 14, in a lonely field in Wayland.

The men, it is charged took the girls for an automobile ride and in Wayland, carried them from the machine into the field. The terrified shrieks of the girls attracted passing motorists and the three men fled. The girls were treated by a surgeon at Waltham. Several hours later officers Dacey and Hall arrested the three suspects, who today were positively identified by their little victims, when they were lined up at the police station.

The men are Francis Dugan of Chatham street, Worcester; Robert Sattel of Myrtle street, Worcester, and Edward Guerrin of Chatham street.

The Boston Evening American is withholding the names of the young victims on account of their ages.

NANKING 'RED' ARMY TRAPPED BY GEN. CHIANG

Shanghai, China, April 29 (A.P.).—Chinese advices from Nanking say General Chiang Kai-Shek, moderate Nationalist leader, has decided immediately to declare war against the Hankow Nationalists and has ordered General Yang Sung to proceed against them with a punitive expedition of 80,000 men.

Shanghai, April 29 (A.P.).—General Chiang Kai-Shek, the moderate Chinese commander, is reported in Chinese advices from Nanking to have rounded up the entire army under General Chen Chiung to have disarmed all of Chiang troops, killing thirty, and to have captured large numbers at Wuhu and other towns.

These advices told of the cutting of the railway between Nanking and Kiukiang to prevent the escape of Chen's troops.

Chen was in command of the Cantonese at Nanking during the outrages that prompted the shelling of the city by American and British warships.

Having completed a study of the situation in Shanghai, Professor Manley O. Hudson of Harvard Law School, departing for Europe today by way of Siberia said:

"Shanghai is not like any other city in the world. The nearest approach to it is Tangier. My study led me to think its control is more international in name than in fact. The consular officials have not enough authority to be called the real governing power.

"No one stands to gain from the stalemate, with armed forces entrenched behind barricades. The first opportunity to end it ought to be seized even if it is necessary to negotiate with the several Chinese governments simultaneously."

Woman Among Communists Strangled in Pekin

Pekin, April 29 (A.P.).—Four Chinese Communists, including one woman captured in the recent raid by Marshal Chang Tso-Lin's agents on the Soviet Embassy compound here, were strangled by a special court order to twelve years' imprisonment. Six others were given six year each. The sentences followed the execution by strangling of twenty other Chinese, one of them a woman, arrested during the Embassy compound raid.

The wife and two daughters of Li Tai-Chao, one of those executed yesterday, were released today, to gather with a number of others.

None of the Russians detained by the raiders has yet been sentenced.

104TH REGT. IN REUNION

With the dedication tomorrow at the State House of a painting commemorating the decoration of its colors by Lt. French as its objective, the regimental reunion of the 104th Infantry today got under way with attendance of the veterans at a baseball game between the Red Sox and the New York Yankees.

Tonight at 7:30 the various companies will hold dinners at the Hotel Bellevue, Westminster Hotel, Copley Square Hotel, Colonial Hotel, Louis Restaurant and Minerva Cafe, followed by a midnight show at Loew's State Theatre.

Singer Case Dismissed

West Palm Beach Fla., April 29 (A.P.).—Charges that Paris E. Singer got $1,000,000 under false pretenses were dismissed today at a preliminary hearing before F. M. Houston, a justice of peace.

Pres. Coolidge Sees First Movies of Great Flood

Washington, April 29 (I.N.S.).—First moving pictures of the Mississippi flood region were shown to President Coolidge and his Cabinet today. A projection screen was set up in the cabinet room. The pictures were taken by International News Reel.

NEW HAMPSHIRE FIRES BURN OVER 9,000 ACRES

Concord, N. H., April 29 (A.P.).—Two hundred and fifty-two Forest fires have burned over a territory of 9,000 acres in one of the most serious series of spring fires this State has experienced, the State forestry department announced today.

There is no accurate method of checking the loss in money or the cost of fighting these fires it was said but the figure will be high. Taxes on woods is led, it was pointed out, in reducing the number of fires.

MONDELL'S SON IN AUTO CRASH

Washington, April 29 (I.N.S.).—A youth believed to be H. J. Mondell, son of Frank W. Mondell, former Republican leader of the House, was found early this morning beneath an overturned automobile on Connecticut avenue.

The body was pinned under the car.

ANITA JACQUES BEATEN ON REFUSAL TO ELOPE

New York, April 29 (A.P.).—Angered because Anita Jacques, member of the cast of a current Broadway production refused to elope with him, Edward B. Stone, an actor, attacked the girl and her mother early today in the theatre, according to police. Stone was held under $5,000 bail.

Miss Jacques and Stone came to her home in Bronx and engaged in a fight when the latter asked that they "run away." When her mother tried to call to help Stone threw them with an iron bar.

South is the dealer. What is the proper bidding and play?

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with this method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e., as though all four hands were exposed.

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

South bids four Spades preemptively, although holding strong support for the other Major suit. It is only in exceptional cases that such bidding is sound South's particular holding admits of almost a sure game in Spades, even though his partner hold no Spades, and particularly if his partner hold length in Hearts. Assuming that game is practically sure in Spades, the preemptive bid becomes imperative in order to shut out a possible Minor suit game hand of the opponents. With a low opening bid West would have been in position to show with safety both Clubs and Diamonds and could have made a Small Slam in Diamonds. West's holding hardly admits of a bid of five in either Minor suit, certainly not in the five-card Diamond suit as opposed to the six-card Club suit; while a flat-fiving bid of five Clubs would be severely penalized.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 1. East overtakes the King of Clubs so that if the trick holds he can lead up to the Ace of Diamonds.

Trick 3. West shifts to Diamonds in an effort to establish a trick in that suit before Dummy's Hearts are established.

Trick 7. Declarer continues the trump lead in hope that a Heart will be discarded by an adversary who may have Hearts stopped. But at Trick 8 West's eight of Diamonds showed that his lead of the six was his fourth best, and the play of the Deuce on Trick 7 shows his original holding to have been five. East therefore reads the Declarer with four Hearts and by discarding all of his Diamonds takes a Heart trick and saves a Small Slam.

WORK SURE CURE FOR STUDENTS

Mixing With Non-College Men Found to Remove False Sense of Security

The "white collar complex" is eliminated from college students when they are given an opportunity to work by virtue of a co-operative agreement between colleges and industrial concerns while pursuing their studies, leading educators and business men were told today at the University Club by Vice-President Carl S. Ell of Northeastern University.

"Mixing with capable non-college men frees the students from any false sense of supremacy and gives them general appreciation of the work of men with whom they come in contact," said Mr. Ell.

"They lose some of their conceit and come to see their abilities and limitations as they actually are."

"Colleges should provide frequent lectures by industrial leaders," declared Prof. Hudson V. Hastings of the Department of Industrial Engineering at Yale. "Colleges can thus teach by indirection that education is to be used and not worn as an ornament."

CO-OPERATIVE EDUCATION.

The subject of the conference was "A Practical Basis of Co-operative Education Between Colleges and Industry," and among those who took part in the discussion following the addresses of Professor Hastings and Vice-President Ell were:

W. Irving Clark of the Norton Company, Worcester; Colonel R. I. Ives of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company; R. F. Harrington of the Hunt-Spiller Corporation, Professor C. F. Woodbury of Norwich, Dean Groat of the University of Vermont, Herbert Saul and K. E. Adams of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company, L. S. Harding of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, Professor W. H. Timbie of M. I. T. and Ralph G. Wills of Boston University, with Robert G. Small, director of the Massachusetts Department of Education, presiding.

The value of a college education as a preparation for business and industry was discussed in the afternoon, the speakers including Clifton V. Gray, president of Bates College; Henry B. Dennison, president of the Dennison Manufacturing Company; James L. McConaughty, president of Wesleyan University, and Victor M. Cutter, president of the United Fruit Company.

COLLEGES FALLING DOWN.

"Colleges today are not satisfactorily preparing men for business," Roger W. Babson, famous economic expert, told the conference.

"This does not mean college graduates are not sought. College graduates are sought, because young men with the best inheritance, environment and ambitions go to colleges. If executives could secure the same young men before they went to college, or at the end of their first year, these executives believe the young men would be better, stronger and of more use.

"The young man who went to college 40 years ago had learned, by home instruction before going to college, to do the thing he did not want to do, when he did not want to do it. With the young men who go to college today this is a lost art, yet this training is the basis of success."

IN HARVARD CLUB'S SHOW

SHAKESPEARE IN ULTRA MODERN FORM

Miss Frances Small, Radcliffe '28, will be cast as Katherine when the Harvard Dramatic Club presents "The Taming of the Shrew" for the first time on Tuesday evening, May 3, at Brattle Hall in Cambridge. Costumes will be in the mode of 20th Century Paris and New York and the action will be put over in musical comedy style.

MATE RIDES TIRE RACK TO WATCH

Then Has Fight With Autoist Over Wife; Court Quotes Kipling in $300 Fine

"Keep away from married quarters."

This sage advice of Sergeant Mulvaney in Kipling's "Soldiers Three" was quoted by Judge Stone in East Cambridge District Court today to Michael L. Horrigan of Harvard street, Cambridge, found guilty of assault on Joseph S. Keating.

Horrigan appealed a sentence of one month and $300 fine and will be tried in superior Court.

Keating told of following his wife, of watching her climb into an automobile driven by Horrigan, a married man, and of how he clung on the rear tire carrier for several blocks, finally confronting Horrigan when the car stopped. He was trying to pretend he was an auto tire.

"He lifted a hammer over me and threw it at me," testified Keating, who was himself found not guilty of malicious injury to property in smashing the rear window of the automobile as he took his precarious ride.

Horrigan declared in his own defense that he intended only to frighten Keating and quit his meeting with Mrs. Keating was by chance.

COOL TONIGHT, THEN WARMER

Cloudy skies were today predicted for the week-end by the Hub weather forecaster, with a threat of rain in two storm areas moving slowly eastward.

Lower temperatures are also in the offing tonight with a probable rise tomorrow and Sunday. The most serious storm threat is coming from the Missouri region, with the other on its way from Canada. Strong westerly winds are due to prevail.

Pleasant surroundings count. If you are not satisfied with your room—there's a suitable one listed for you in today's Classified Columns. Classification 90.

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

Jacqueline Kay, nineteen and attractive, comes to Boston from Houlton, Me., and obtains an engagement as singer at the Sea Shell, a cabaret. The proprietor, Julius Lupino, takes more than a friendly interest in her. She meets Tom Ware, who is informed by Lupino that Jacqueline is under Lupino's personal care. Lupino accompanies her home. She is accosted by a man whom Lupino kills. The offender is a notorious criminal. Lupino is arrested and admits the killing. He announces his love for Jacqueline. Jacqueline leaves the Sea Shell, but is persuaded to return by Abe Gordon, Lupino's lawyer. She does so, and Lupino is released on bail. Ware declares his love for Jacqueline and asks her to marry him. Lupino reveals his knowledge of Jacqueline's affairs and she realizes that he is having her followed. Lupino asks Jacqueline to marry him, and when she refuses, he tells her that if he can't have her, no one else ever will. May, one of the chorus girls, also warns Jacqueline against Lupino and "The Spook," his henchman. Jacqueline suddenly determines to quit the Sea Shell, and Lupino, immediately. She starts home, first trying vainly to get Tom Ware on the telephone.

CHAPTER 22

SLOWLY, for the first time, Jacqueline's eyes rested on the little dancer with a steady, attentive gaze.

Just now, all of a sudden, it was borne upon her that May, the little elfin figure on the dance floor—fairy grace personified was a tired, tragic woman. Now, at close range, Jacqueline saw May—saw the woman and not the scanty bodice of beads and spangles, the little rounded powdered chin, the black beauty-patch high on the cheekbone, the chemical gold of her curling hair. Here . . . here were the relics of youth on the wane; here were eyes, round and blue, with obscure sorrow lurking in their weary depth.

"You don't think I'm too fresh, dearie, do you?" May's tone was wistfully eager. "I wouldn't talk like this to you only it gets my goat to—"

She broke off abruptly. Behind the black, mascaraed fringe of her lashes, came suddenly a black, shining film. Between the two girls, spontaneously, sprang an indefinable bond . . . some amalgamation of feeling as though against a common menace. Jacqueline's heart beat increasingly with a heavy uneasiness.

"I see Lupino with his eye on you all the time," the half-clad little figure said cautiously, "and I know what that means . . . and I can feel it. I don't want to frighten you, but it preys on my mind, and I've simply got to tip you off. I tried to warn you about Lupino the other night, but I've got to make it plainer. He is after you, and he gets . . . what he wants."

Jacqueline's heart was a leaden,

WINCHESTER TO HAVE HEALTH SURVEY

State health authorities are ready to embark on a complete health survey. Winchester has been picked as the town to start with. The results of the test will determine the next steps to be taken by the department.

At least 95 per cent. of the 3,338 homes in Winchester will be entered and these questions asked:

Position in the household (father, child, maid, etc.).

Is individual a wage-earner?

Is the individual sick at the present time?

If so, what is the complaint?

What method of treatment is being used?

How much time was lost from work?

What contagious diseases has the child had?

How long ago did he have the disease?

Did a doctor see the case?

Four special workers have been chosen by Dr. Clarence Seaman, director of the division of communicable diseases, to assist Dr. Herbert L. Lombard, epidemiologist of the department, to make the survey. They are Dr. Irene Hogan of Newton, Miss Anna Crivello of Everett, a social worker; Miss Mary Cronin of Boston and Mrs. Philip Forsbeck of Boston.

WILLETT AGAIN LOSES IN SUIT FOR MILLIONS

George F. Willett's fight for the $10,000,000 Norfolk jury verdict against Robert Herrick and a group of Boston bankers received another setback today at the hands of the Massachusetts Supreme Court.

Notification was sent to the plaintiff that his petition for a rehearing of the Willett-Sears case was denied.

The petition was filed with the Supreme Court on April 2 by Attorney Boyd B. Jones, associate of Sherman L. Whipple in the conduct of the famous case after the jury ward had been set aside by that body. The petition consisted of motions asking for a reargument and rehearing on exceptions filed by the defendants's lawyers. Attorney Jones filed a motion asking the Supreme Court to set aside any judgment of finding pending settlement of the previous motions.

There have been indications that counsel for Herrick were preparing to take the case before the United States Supreme Court in the event of an adverse ruling on their motions, such as has occurred. They have ordered a transcript of the decision of the full bench of the Massachusetts supreme court, which would indicate that a writ of certiorari will be requested.

In the event of such action, the petition will be before the Federal Supreme Court, one of whose justices will decide whether a question proper for that court to consider is involved.

Attorney Jones at today following receipt of the denial of Willett's petition, that a definite decision regarding future steps will not be taken for a week or ten days.

ESCAPED LEPER IS BROUGHT TO BOSTON

Emanuel Sousa, twenty-year-old leper who escaped from the National Leperosarium at Carrville, La., a week ago, was brought to Boston in a stretcher case Providence today and was delivered to the Army base from where he was removed to the government quarantine hospital on Gallup's Island.

The young leper was captured by the Rhode Island authorities several days after his escape and, There was no place in Rhode Island where Sousa could be confined and the government authorities finally directed that he be taken to Gallup's Island, pending his return to the Louisiana colony.

The Massachusetts health authorities gave permission for the leper to be brought into this State. At the quarantine hospital, Dr. A. R. Sweeney, who is in charge, examined the patient on his arrival there today.

"Young Sousa doesn't show a single mark of the disease on his body," said Dr. Sweeney. "He has been at the leper colony undergoing treatment for the past five years and the treatment has apparently helped him considerably.

50 DETECTIVES BLOCK LYNN HOLDUP

More than fifty plain clothesmen were station in the business district of Lynn today to guard against a payroll robbery on which the police had been "tipped" early today.

The "tip" came from a South End man who said he had overheard five men planning to steal a payroll of a Washington street Lynn shoe manufacturer.

FINE RABBI $200 IN WINE CASE

Solomon Selzer, a rabbi, of Glenway str et, Dorchester, was today found guilty of violating the liquor laws and fined $200 in Dorchester District Court. He appealed.

He declared in his defense that [illegible] raiders was for sacramental purposes, for which he had a permit.

The raid resulted, according to the police, from a sale to Morris Levin of Abbott street, who was found guilty of illegal transportation and fined $100. He, too, appealed.

Levin testified he paid $2 a quart. Counsel for Rabbi Selzer interrupted him with the question, "You mean you donated that much, don't you?" To which Levin replied, "I know I had to pay it before I got the wine."

The Red Signal — Accusation — By Homer Banks

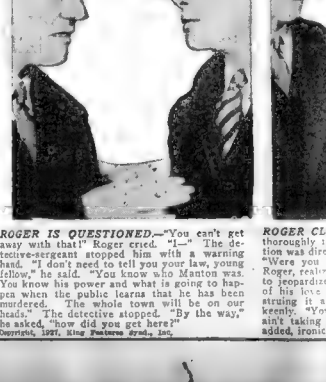
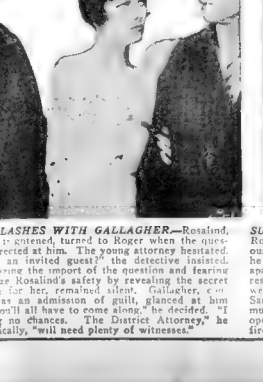
DETECTIVES CONFRONT ROSALIND.—"Is this the woman?" asked Sergeant Gallagher. A guest nodded. "Get up, miss!" he commanded. "We want to question you." Roger leaped to his feet. "That's no way to talk to a lady," he protested. "I'm an attorney representing Miss Dwight, and as such I forbid her to speak." Gallagher turned to him. "You do, eh?" he replied sarcastically. "Well, you ought to earn quite a fee. Get your coat on, for we're going to the station house. The District Attorney will want to see her, I think."

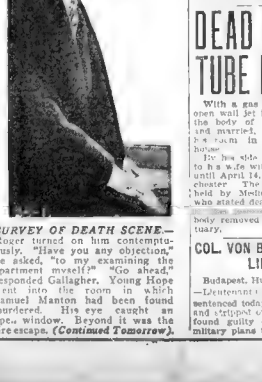


ROGER IS QUESTIONED.—"You can't get away with that!" Roger cried. "I—" The detective-sergeant stopped him with a warning hand. "I don't need to tell you your law, young fellow," he said. "You know who Manton was. You know his power and what is going to happen when the public learns that he has been murdered. The whole town will be on our heads." The detective stopped. "By the way," he asked, "how did you get here?"

Copyright, 1927, King Features Syndicate, Inc.



ROGER CLASHES WITH GALLAGHER.—Rosalind, thoroughly frightened, turned to Roger when the question was directed at him. The young attorney hesitated. "Were you an invited guest?" the detective insisted. Roger, realizing the import of the question and fearing to jeopardize Rosalind's safety by revealing the secret of his love for her, remained silent. Gallagher, construing it as an admission of guilt, glanced at him keenly. "You'll all have to come along," he decided. "I ain't taking no chances. The District Attorney," he added, ironically, "will need plenty of witnesses."



SURVEY OF DEATH SCENE.—Roger turned on him contemptuously. "Have you any objection," he asked, "to my examining the apartment myself?" "Go ahead," responded Gallagher. Young Hope went into the room in which Samuel Manton had been found murdered. His eye caught an open window. Beyond it was the fire escape. (Continued Tomorrow).

DEAD WITH GAS TUBE IN MOUTH

With a gas tube connected to an open wall jet inserted in his mouth, the body of George Williams, 55, and married, was found in bed in his room in a Shawmut avenue house.

By his side was a note addressed to his wife with whom he had lived until April 14, in Lenox street, Dorchester. The contents were withheld by Medical Examiner Leary, who stated death was due to suicide.

[illegible] ordered the body removed to the southern morgue.

RIP RAP IS EAST HOPE IN DERBY

More Than a Score of Entries Have a Chance to Win; Sande to Ride Scapa Flow

Louisville, Ky., April 29 (A.P.).—More than a score of the 162 nominees for the fifty-third running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs May 14 stood out today as of Derby calibre. More good colts, fillies and geldings have come through the Winter and early Spring training in better condition than for some years.

The Eastern-owned eligibles, at present, appear to have the edge on the Western contingent. Western turfmen, however, have heard that more before only to come out and won in convincing fashion.

STARS OF THE EAST.

Rip Rap, Scapa Flow, Osmand, Kloy, Valorous, Whiskery, Topgan, Jock, War Eagle Sweepster, Fair Star and a few others are the Eastern specialists to watch.

Rip Rap, son of Broomstick, out of [illegible], is today classed in the East

Scapa Flow, son of Man o' War, regarded by many as the best two-year-old last year, is being worked at Pimlico. Horsemen in that section believe he will take the measure of Osmand, Joseph E. Widener's Winter favorite colt, which is training at Churchill Downs with Widener's imported colt Kloy.

Earl Sande will have the mount on Scapa Flow in the $50,000 race.

VALOROUS LOOKS GOOD.

Valorous, a Pennant-Courage colt, looks the best of the H. P. Whitney band although Whiskery is the only one of the New York sportsman's seven nominees to win this year.

Jopsam, a Maryland-owned runner, was the best on the Canadian tracks last season. He won from Rip Rap and Scapa Flow at Havre De Grace Thursday.

Jock, owned by E. B. McLean, Washington and Cincinnati publisher, is fancied over his stablemate War Eagle, as a Derby prospect. He is training well here.

The "Old Master," Sam Hildreth, has Sweepster in charge and reports are that he is bringing his charge around nicely.

EIGHT RIFLE CLUBS TO SHOOT TOMORROW

The second match in the Eastern Massachusetts Rifle League series will be shot on tomorrow afternoon when the Framingham team will meet Arlington on the latter's range at East Lexington. Reading will meet Lincoln at Reading; the Lynn club will compete with the United Shoe at West Park, Beverly, and the big match of the day will be the match between Braintree and Middlesex at Braintree.

The Middlesex Club has won the league trophy for the past two years, being the only team to defeat Braintree last season.

DEMPSEY IS HIS OWN PILOT

New York, April 29 (I.N.S.).—The $300,000 which Jack Dempsey will receive for his bout with Paolino Uzcudun here early in July will be all velvet," it appeared today, for the former heavyweight champion has no manager to claim a share of the golden harvest. Gene Normile, who is in this city, declares he is no longer Dempsey's business representative.

If Dempsey beats the woodchopper he probably will be matched with the winner of the Maloney-Sharkey bout for the right to meet Gene Tunney, the champion.

Promoter Tex Rickard will deposit a second $100,000 with the New York Trust Company today, guaranteeing that he will go through with the promotion of the title bout.

Tunney will not be required to put up his $50,000 forfeit, as provided for in his contract with Rickard, until he starts actual training.

READING MAY RETURN TO TWILIGHT LOOP

Reading, one of the charter members of the Boston Twilight League, is likely to step back into the fold again after an absence of several years, according to President J. W. Mooney of the "Twi" circuit.

Frank Tanner, who formerly managed the Reading team, and Frank Donovan, manager of the Salem team, have had a conference relative to putting a team back in Reading, and the proposition will come up for ratification of the league members at the meeting next week.

MURCHIE WINS NO. 7 SEAT ON HARVARD CREW

Guy Murchie is virtually certain to row in the No. 7 seat in the Harvard varsity crew against the Naval Academy next week.

Coach Ed Brown has put Bob Ladd, who was tried at this position first, in the No. 8 seat, and unless Capt. Geoffrey Platt returns to the boat, will occupy that position in the race against the middies.

If Platt returns in time, Ladd will move back to No. 2, and either Bill Emmett or Bill Saltonstall demoted to the second varsity.

These are the only possibilities of change during the next week, barring injuries.

The two varsity boats raced for nearly two miles under the mentor's direction. Starting at Watertown, the second varsity, stroked by Kim Norton, was sent off with a two-lengths lead. About the mile-and-a-half mark, the second still maintained its advantage, but at this point Jack Watts put the stroke up. Norton's shirt then got tangled up with his slide and the boat had to stop.

The oarsmen were disappointed that the brush had to be called off.

The two boats are listed to race again this afternoon, and once the early part of next week before leaving for Annapolis. Present plans call for the squad to leave Thursday night, and go direct to Annapolis. Two easy workouts will take place on Friday.

The man will be quartered in Bancroft Hall with the midshipmen, and will take their meals at the Naval Academy training table. Only substitute Wm. Make the trip, Capt Platt.

Million for Dempsey in Three Bouts

—By Jack Conway—

"I HAVE just been doing a little figuring," remarked Mr. Boston by way of opening, "and I find that Jack Dempsey will make more money this year than he ever made as champion. I am only going to place one IF in my statement. The IF applies to the former champion's ability to win over the victor of the Sharkey-Maloney bout.

"Dempsey has agreed to fight three times for Tex Rickard this year. His first start will find him pitted against Paolino, the sad faced Spanish woodchopper. Paolino had all he could do to win from Knute Hansen, while he was handed a gift decision over Tom Heeney. Unless I miss my guess by a couple of miles, Dempsey will make the woodchopper think a flock of trees toppled on him.

"The Dempsey-Paolino bout won't have the color of the Dempsey-Firpo tussle, but it will nevertheless drag close to $750,000 into the box office. Such a financial killing will net Dempsey $250,000 or so. This will be within $50,000 of the purse which Dempsey and Kearns cut up after the Carpentier mixup. I don't know how Estelle carves Jack's purses, but I hardly believe she clips him as hard as Kearns did.

"Dempsey against the winner of the Sharkey-Maloney shindig will draw more than a million dollars. It will be what the dear old promoters term as natural. While most people believe Dempsey will conquer Paolino, there would be plenty of arguments as to whether the Hollywood Terror could sock his way to a win over Sharkey or Maloney.

"Dempsey would also be on the big end of the dough in this match and would haul down $400,000 or so.

"If Dempsey gets by the victor of the Sharkey-Maloney affair, he will be tossed in with Gene Tunney. The former marine would get the big money in this match, but even if Jack was only paid off on a 20 per cent. basis he would drag down $400,000 and he might also regain his championship.

"This program would net the firm of Jack & Estelle $1,050,000 which isn't anything to be sneezed at. It would even top the $750,000 which Dempsey, as champion, picked up last year.

"Despite the fact he has lost his crown, Dempsey is still coining with color. The dear old American public still considers him the greatest killer since the days of John L. Sullivan. That's why he makes the fistic arenas groan when he is billed to shoot his punches.

"MOST of the so-called ring killers are over rated. We have the recent case of Jack Delaney. After Dempsey lost his championship to Tunney, the rain soaked crowd left Philadelphia saying the Bridgeport battler could knock Gene cocked eyed, dumb of five rounds. Then along came our Jimmy Maloney and threw a wet blanket over Delaney's dynamite.

"I remember a chat I had with Bill Muldoon of the New York Boxing Commission last Fall. 'Dempsey will be beaten by Tunney,' said Muldoon. 'No fighter can retain his form after three years of inactivity. Sharkey will also defeat Harry Wills. Dempsey and Wills are fighters of the public imagination. So many stories have been written about them that the public considers them super men. A strong, clever young fellow like Tunney should not have any trouble handling Dempsey, while Sharkey is too fast and clever for the aged Wills.'

"Ring history proved that Muldoon had the real low down on Dempsey and Wills. Sharkey completely ruined Wills' drawing powers when he cut him to ribbons and had him on the verge of a knockout in the thirteenth round when Referee Patsy Haley gave the verdict to the Boston entry on a foul.

"In the case of Dempsey, there were enough elements surrounding the Philade pia bout to make people doubt whether Tunney was really master of Dempsey. The Kearns wrangle, the yarns about poison plots, the court action by the Chicago promoters and poor handling in the training camp and ring made even those close to the boxing racket wonder if Dempsey could not do better if given another chance.

"And now he is going to get it with the prospects of picking up a cool million for his efforts. Wonder if Jack's memories ever go back to the days when he was doing his traveling under freight trains and picking up his meals at switching stations?"

New M.G.A. Handicap System Is Step in Right Direction

By BILL GRIMES.

In revising the State handicaps, the Massachusetts Golf Association made a progressive move, one which in time will work out to the advantage of all, but which at present promises to raise havoc with open tournaments.

At last there are many reasons as to just how State golf leagues are being assorted, the most authentic appears to be that used at the Wollaston open this week. Any player who did not have a 1927 State handicap was allowed to play and his handicap of last year was put on the board.

Bill Grimes

After the play-off started on his round, Freddie Corcoran called the I. G. A. office and reported that such and such a player who showed a 1926 card had made application for a new handicap. In a number of cases players at Wollaston claimed they had State handicaps last season but no records were found to substantiate these statements, and Corcoran was informed that until the records of these players had been received from their clubs, that they would be obliged to play in all tournaments from scratch.

Last season Dan Horan had a book which contained the club and State if they had any handicaps of every player whose club was affiliated with the M. G. A. When a player applied for a State handicap, Horan looked up the club handicap of the applicant and then issued a State card.

EFFICIENT SYSTEM.

Under that system, there were no delays or embarrassing situations. The weakness of the old system was due to the failure of the club secretaries to watch his members and also to the players not reporting rounds which would have brought about cuts in their handicaps.

Under the present system of handicapping, it is necessary for all players to turn into their club secretaries five attested cards before they are eligible for a State card. That is a movement in the right direction but it will work a hardship on the open tournaments for some weeks.

The golf season is just getting underway. Many of the players are still playing preferred lies and the players have not as yet attained their real form. It would be unfair to the players, whose club is using Winter rules to turn in a card at this season of the year. Also, many players have not had an opportunity to get in a sufficient number of rounds to make them eligible for State handicaps.

Had the Massachusetts Golf Association gone one step farther and placed a time limit of say, June 1, for all open tournament players to have their five attested cards in the hands of their club secretaries or play from scratch, and allow them to use their 1926 handicaps in the meanwhile, it would have satisfied everyone and avoided all wrangles.

Due to the small field at Wollaston and the numerous "no cards" few players gave any thought to their handicaps but it will be a different story at the Woodland four-ball tournament this coming week. When a field of a couple of hundred golfers will turn out

CORCORAN WILL BE BUSY.

If Freddie Corcoran has to run to the telephone everytime a golfer without a 1927 State card starts off, he will be one of the busier young men in this section next Thursday and Friday.

And when the golfers return and are informed that as no record of their ability has been received at the M. G. A. office, somebody is going to be severely criticised and as Corcoran will, in all probability be the only representative of the M. G. A. on hand, he will receive most of the blame.

Once the season gets well under way, the new system of handicapping will be a marked improvement over the old method. It will have the support of every golfer with the exception of the "mug hunters" who having been the direct cause of the change, carry no weight and deserve no consideration.

Fortunately for the golfers there are no open tournaments after the Woodland four-ball until the Scotch foursomes at Tedesco, which starts on May 24. By that time much of the trouble will be over, until the collections return home and are obliged to go through the same routine.

Geiger's Plan Let Kiddies Pay Good Idea

Cav's Opinion Many Agree Hamilton Holt

GEIGER HAS NOVEL PLAN TO RAISE FUND

AL GEIGER, who handles sports at the B. A. A. very efficiently, has a bird of a scheme to collect expenses for the next American Olympic team. Snaring enough dough to send our athletes out to lick the world has always been a tough proposition. It has caused bad feeling at times, and the big burden is usually carried by two or three of the wealthy lovers of sport.

This, as Al claims, sort of makes the Olympic team a rich man's plaything rather than a group that the country at large feels a real personal interest in. Mr. Geiger is about to launch a campaign through the school kids.

Nick Flatley

He will try to have every youngster in the country contribute one penny for the Olympic team. There are, in this broad land, some 24,000,000 children making more or less earnest attempts to assimilate the three Rs. That, as you can see for yourself, would mean a tidy sum of $240,000, which would permit our athletes to live and travel in the style to which they are accustomed.

This plan would seem to have a lot of common sense attached. It would appeal to the youngsters and it would create the fund quickly and pleasantly. Every kid, with his cent invested, would feel a proprietary interest in our next Olympic team at Amsterdam.

We recall in the somewhat faroff days of our youth that Tom Lawson was building his cup challenger, the Independence, at East Boston. We weren't such a kid at that, but we gathered quite a kick by dropping a dime, a lot of money in those days, into the keel.

Then, when the racer was launched, we did have a real interest in it, and felt almost as bad as Tom when it proved not to be fast enough to defend America's honor on the rippling waves.

Seems to us that Mister Geiger has a notion that will go quite a way toward building up a lot of real track fans in the younger generation.

BETTING IS NOW 50 TO 1 THAT JACK DEMPSEY WILL KNOCK PAOLINO FLATTER THAN A COP'S ARCHES.

An athlete has to be right to win at the Penn relays, the new head office boy informs us.

"CAV" RAPS CHANGES IN GRID RULES

MAJOR FRANK CAVANAUGH, a far-sighted individual, doesn't hesitate to say that the football rules committee is trying to turn the grid game into English rugby. The major isn't alone in that belief, either. The introduction of the lateral pass twist this year is decidedly English, and does blot out one of the brightest and most thrilling features of American football.

The English tendency can be discovered in quite a few of our sports; natural objection can be discovered in the hearts of most real Americans.

HAMILTON HOLT, with his college of 66 students, should know all about athletic corruption. It would seem that he's paging a bigger job.

Fordham Boy Takes 400 Meter Race From Burghley

Franklin Field, Philadelphia, April 29 (A.P.).—Lord David Burghley, titled British hurdler from Cambridge University, was defeated by Johnny Gibson, stocky Fordham University star, in a special 400 meter hurdle race at the Pennsylvania relay carnival. Another Cambridge entrant, T. C. Livingston-Learmouth, was third and last.

Lord Burghley made a gallant effort to repeat his 1925 triumph in this event, his failed only by a yard to close a gap of five yards that Gibson gained in the early part of the race when the blond pink-cheeked Briton nobleman stumbled over one of the hurdles and lost his stride.

The British star, who had the crowd "pulling" for him in his game closing spurt, rushed up to pat Gibson on the back after the finish.

Gibson was pushed most of the way by Livingston Learmouth, but the latter dropped back in the last few yards. It was the second straight year the Fordham ace has won the event. His time was 55 2-5 seconds, one second slower than the carnival record.

Virgil Elliott, the "Flying Parson" from Bethany College, West Virginia, got off to a good start in his bid for all-around athletic honors today when he won the 100-meter dash, first event in the intercollegiate decathlon championship featuring the opening of the Pennsylvania relay carnival.

Elliott broke the tape in 11 2-5 seconds, equalling the carnival decathlon record he established last year. T. a was one-fifth second better than the performance of his nearest rival, Doc Stuntidge of Depauw University, Indiana.

The high jump went to John Doherty, College of City of Detroit, who cleared a ft 11 inches, two inches better than Stuntidge and Logan.

GREAT ARRAY OF LOCAL STARS IN PENN GAMES

The week-end of strenuous athletic competition which takes place in Philadelphia starting today, on the occasion of the annual Penn Relays, will go a long way toward enlightening the track outlook for the year.

It will, in addition, serve to condition the large number of young stars in college ranks for their future competitions.

This is particularly true at Harvard, inasmuch as Eddie Farrell's team, which is the indoor intercollegiate champion, numbers on its roster no less than ten sophomores. As was the case on the Crimson football team last Fall, these young stars form not only a strong bulwark for the present year, but upon them rests largely the athletic hope of the University for the next two seasons.

Farrell's team includes but two seniors, so the future for Harvard is not at all dull. Lee, star weight hurler; Sam Watrous, Frank Kiro and others were lost by graduation there was cause for pessimism, although this state of mind proved subsequently to be unfounded. Now, with a swarm of highly promising young stars on the lists, the next two years of track competition should be exceptionally fruitful in Cambridge.

The Crimson athletes who are second year men are Winn Smith, Leslie Blaksman, whose running was instrumental in the winning of the indoor title, Jimmie Reid, Jimmie Wilder, Tom Dunn, George Tupper, Art French, David White, W. M. Dowland and Dave Guarnaccia.

Seventeen members of Jack Ryder's Boston College troupe have left for the City of Brotherly Love. Jack decided that George Zeus, Wesley, (by a gridiron name, will enter the decathlon, and also feels that he will fare very well in this strenuous competition.

The Biggest Moment in My Biggest Fight

By JOHNNY WILSON

MY biggest moment came the first time I fought Mike O'Dowd and beat him for the world's middleweight championship at Mechanics' Pavilion in Boston.

Mike was a big favorite, having whipped Joe Egan and Ted (Kid) Lewis among a host of others. Still, I was pretty strong among the Boston folks, and was going great guns—numbering Pal Reed, Young Fisher, Pal Moriarty and others in my list of victims. The prophets didn't seem to take my chances very seriously, so I went to work. I took the opinion of Mr. Grady, every newspaper writer, lying. It was the biggest one of the bouts.

Maybe I was. If so the credit is greater for me. Anyway it must be admitted that Mike O'Dowd was a wonderful fighter. He had everything a champion needs, including the absolute belief that he could knock me off without any trouble.

If he had felt otherwise he would have been good business to make me come in over the recognized poundage of the class. There even if he had been beside he would have been the champion. But Mike didn't take that into account at all, and he weighed in at 158 pounds.

In the second round I hopped a left to O'Dowd's lower regulars, and the great Michael flopped to the floor. I don't know whether he was the more surprised of the two, but I had a great home-coming as he got.

He was on his feet at "four," if he knew that I could punch, and I knew that he could take it. Mike and me, down are fighters. I know what this means. Before that punch landed the champion had been fairly outfought, especially as he wasn't so sure. After that punch landed my confidence is built he is beaten, but I feel.

Mike was a tough one at it, as days. He didn't show trouble, because I had knocked him down, and he didn't forget his fingers. But he did stay on the defensive and let me carry the fight to him. I am quite willing to do that, and all through the battle was trying to re-

Interesting Ways of Using Apricots in the Menu

By MARTHA LEE

EVER since a specialist assured me that apricots were an important item on reducing diets, I have eaten them religiously and it's surprising in how many interesting ways they can be used.

And there's no denying that they are healthful and delicious whether you use them in their dried form or as they are put up by the modern fruit canning plants. Right from the can they are delicious for a breakfast fruit or for any other occasion. I'm going to give you some recipes for both the canned and dried fruit.

Apricot Pudding—Put a layer of bread crumbs in the bottom of buttered custard cups, then one or more apricots, drained from juice. Sprinkle apricot with sugar and a little cinnamon. Place another layer of crumbs on top, dot with bits of butter and additional sprinkling of sugar.

Moisten contents of each custard cup with about two tablespoons of apricot juice. Bake about fifteen minutes. Serve hot with sweet pudding sauce.

Apricot Roly Poly—Two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, three-fourths teaspoon salt, two tablespoons sugar, 4 tablespoons fat, one egg, one-half cup milk, one can of apricots, one cup sugar.

Mix as baking powder biscuits, sift dry ingredients, rubbing in fat adding egg slightly beaten with milk. Roll to one-fourth inch thickness in oblong shape. Spread with the drained apricots, sprinkle with sugar, dot with butter, roll crosswise to make a long roll, place in well-greased bread pan. Bake in hot oven about ten minutes, reduce heat, baste with syrup drained from the apricots. Serve with cream. Will serve six persons.

Apricot Conserve—Three lbs dried apricots, two cups canned grated pineapple, one-fourth pound shelled blanched almonds, two and one-half pounds sugar.

Wash the apricots, cover with warm water and soak overnight. Add one cup more of water and sugar. Cook very slowly until somewhat thick; add pineapple and almonds. Set kettle on an asbestos plate and cook slowly until very thick. Store in sterilized jars or jelly glasses. This is the best conserve you ever tasted. And better yet, your family will dip in for a second helping.

Apricot Conserve Cake—One cup sugar, two-thirds cup fat, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda, one teaspoon baking powder, three eggs, two cups flour, one-half teaspoon mixed spice, one-half cup apricot conserve.

Cream butter, add sugar gradually then the beaten yolks of the eggs sift dry ingredients and add alternately with the milk. Add apricot conserve and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in layers in a moderate oven about twenty minutes. Put together with icing or butter cream filling. (Sweet milk may be substituted for the sour by using one-half teaspoon soda instead of one teaspoon.

Seven Minute Icing—Seven-eighths cup sugar, three tablespoons cold water, one egg white (unbeaten), one teaspoon vanilla one-half cup cooked apricots or prunes, one dozen marshmallows.

Put sugar, water and unbeaten egg into a one-quart double boiler. When water in lower part of double boiler is boiling vigorously set in the top part with the ingredients and beat constantly with a Dover egg beater for seven minutes.

Remove from fire and stir in marshmallows cut in quarters and finely chopped cooked or steamed apricots or prunes. Flavor with vanilla or lemon and spread on any plain cake. Will cover two layers.

Apricot Meringue Pie—Two cups apricots, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon cornstarch, one tablespoon water, two eggs, two tablespoons sugar, lemon flavoring.

Mash two cups cooked apricots sweeten to taste and heat in double boiler. Mix cornstarch and cold water and add to mixture and cook until thick; add butter. Add mixture slowly to beaten yolks. Pour into baked pastry shell. Beat whites very stiff; add sugar and flavoring. Spread over pie. Brown in a slow oven. Will serve six persons. This makes a most attractive dessert when made in individual pastry shells.

THE AGE OF INDISCRETION SEEMS NEVER WITH US
© 1927 Premier Syndicate, Inc.; Great Britain rights reserved.

WHEN is a GIRL NOT a girl? Or is it When is a GIRL not a WOMAN? For Today WOMEN say they are ALL GIRLS together.
It is really very CONFUSING!

There used to be an age where "WOMANHOOD and GIRLHOOD met," but nobody knows Where it IS any more YOUNG people seem OLD and old ones seem young.

The AWKWARD AGE is a thing of the PAST, And the Age of INDISCRETION seems ever With us—and ALL AGES of women seem Delightfully DANGEROUS—to themselves.

The PRICELESS AGE is the Age of UNDERSTANDING. Wise MEN and Fine WOMEN both REACH it, but It is certainly not—for GIRLS.

Most Blindness Is Preventable

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.
Former President of the American Medical Association.

YOUR natural interest in your own eyesight and that of your children should prompt you to take a deep interest in the labors of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, which is laboring to teach the people that a very great deal of blindness is preventable.

This is illustrated by some England statistics that I happen to have before me. In 1921 there were just under 25,000 blind persons in England and Wales, about 10 per cent of whom had become blind during the first year of life, while about 30 per cent became blind in each succeeding decade.

Of the greatest cause of blindness was venereal disease, which is, or should be, preventable. It follows, therefore, that a very large proportion of blindness is entirely preventable.

About half the infants who became blind lost their sight as a result of gonorrhoea in the mother.

It was found that 10 to 20 per cent. of school children were blind from this cause, which constitutes one of the most tragic wastes of efficiency in modern civil nation

Any mother who thinks she has ever suffered from this disease should put herself under special care as soon as she knows she is pregnant, for the doctor can give her a course of treatment which may save her child from death, blindness or disease.

Even if this is not done, the baby's eyes can usually be saved by proper attention in the first few days after its birth.

Any discharge from an infant's eyes should at once be brought to the notice of a doctor—and hours are more valuable than days.

The other form of venereal disease, syphilis, causes about 10 to 15 per cent. of all cases of blindness. About a third of the children who lose their sight do so because their parents have had this disease and have not undergone the necessary course of treatment which would have prevented them from handing it on to their children.

Unsanitary conditions of life have been found to be the cause of the blindness of 3½ per cent. of blind children.

Measles may cause an ulceration of the eye that results in blindness. It is, therefore, very important that a doctor should look after the eyes of any child who has measles.

It was found that 3 per cent. of blind children and 14 per cent. of blind adults owe their condition to untreated short sight, but many authorities hold that this figure underestimates the serious loss and disease due to this cause.

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have known a certain young lady for five years. For the first year of our acquaintance we kept steady company, but through some misunderstanding we broke up. It was just a mere trifle, and since that time I have never taken her out. Of course, I see her occasionally, but just say "hello."

Now, through a strange trick of fate, we have moved directly across the street from her. I have seen her every day for three months and am more than ever in love with her.

How can I go about telling her I want to take her out? I haven't the nerve to stop her on the street. And if I should call her up and be refused, surely then we could never be anything more than friends.

I would do anything to win her, for I believe she really cares for me. I have a very good position and could support her wonderfully well should she consent to become my wife.

Please advise me, for I love her with all my heart and soul.

BROKEN HEARTED FRIEND.

WRITE the girl you love a friendly but not sentimental note, asking whether you may call on her any evening she may select, because you have a message for her. If she is inclined to think kindly of you she will doubtless permit you to call and deliver your message.

Tell her frankly when you call how much you have missed her friendship and ask whether you and she may not be friends again. Probably she will be glad to renew the old friendship, unless she is much interested in some other young man, which may be the case, you know, after four years.

If you are fortunate enough to win another chance, make sure that no quarrels or misunderstandings arise this time. Prove yourself in every way a considerate and devoted friend. When a friendship is firmly established there will be time to think of love. All success to you.

The Meditations of a Wife

THE average man's heart, like a popular singer's program, is always "subject to change without notice."

Most of us are committing suicide these days, by overstraining the heart, in an attempt to get in all the thrills out of life that there are in it.

At the time of the year, a cautious man always prays that his common sense will "work" like a parachute and save him at the last moment from falling FATALLY in love.

After a man has been around Lake house all day Sunday, the graveyard quiet of Monday morning is apt to make the average wife so nervous that she has to turn on the radio, the phonograph and the vacuum-cleaner, just to make things seem "natural."

* * *

Before marriage, a lover's eyes are filled with star-dust; but the glitter you see in them after marriage more apt to be wanderlust.

"The prices of mother-of-pearl shells have dropped so low that diving has been restricted in order to raise the value!" Ah, yes, the plentiful supply of ANYTHING lessens the demand and lowers the value—whether it's pearls, diamonds or a woman's kisses! But you can't make a sophisticated modern girl believe a simple thing like that!

There are two kinds of masculine love-making: the kind that kindles your imagination—and the kind that leaves you without any imagination

* * *

Never trust the lover who has to put his date with you down in a little book! His heart is probably just one long list of telephone numbers!

Now, as always, "Just once more!" is the devil's best argument.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

MY Dear Mrs Beeckman:

In order to settle a question will you kindly let me know who pays for the bouquets of the brides maids and the maid of honor? A says that the groom should buy these bouquets. B says that the parents of the bride should buy them. A also says that if the groom does not pay for them, the ushers and the best man should pay for them.

F.

LET'S begin with the wrong statement. A's last statement, that the ushers and best man should have any part in the payment for these bouquets, is thoroughly incorrect. The ushers and best man are invited to be attendants of the groom, and are not to have the doubtful privilege of sharing the expenses of the wedding.

Usually the parents of the bride send the bouquets to the attendants of their daughter. You see, the bouquets are part of the wedding picture, and the bride and her parents plan them to harmonize—first with the costumes of the attendants and also with the decorations of the church. Therefore, it is natural that they should, most conveniently, send the bouquets, and also, they usually find great pleasure in paying honor and compliment in this way to the friends of their daughter.

Sometimes, though not so often the groom sends the bouquets to the attendants of his bride. If he wishes to take this compliment to himself and thus compliment his bride and her attendants, he should of course, talk it over with his bride and find out from her just what she would send if she were sending the bouquets.

The groom should always, by the way, send a bouquet to the mother of his bride and to his mother.

The HOLLYWOOD GIRL

CHAPTER LVII.

There was something fine and honest and good about Roy Schults. He couldn't have been the great director he was without it.

And whatever it was, it shone in his lean, dark, clever face now as he faced Bobbie across the shining glass top of his desk.

"I've been trying to see Lottie for a week," he said. "I've been up to the house, but she won't see me. She won't answer me on the telephone, and she sends my letters back to me, unopened. I told you she was living up in our house, didn't I?"

"I wish you'd go and talk to her a little," Roy went on, lighting a cigarette. "Maybe you could get over to her the things I want her to know. She ought to realize that I haven't committed a crime just because I had supper at Monica Monti's a couple of times. All husbands slip once in a while, if she only knew it. And I didn't take such a terrible flop as she thinks I did. Monica was cute and she amused me. That was about the size of our so-called love affair.

"Well, I know she's getting ready to divorce me," he said hopelessly. "And I don't suppose anybody can talk her out of doing it. It doesn't mean anything to her that I've been true to her for years and years. All she can think of is that I acted like a blamed fool over Monica for a while."

Then his expression changed suddenly. "Say, that reminds me. I've got a date to take Monica out to supper tonight. Will you and Gus go along?"

Bobbie nodded and went off to her green-and-yellow chintz dressing room to change into her street clothes.

"I'll find Gus and we'll come up here for you," she called to Roy as she went out.

How like a man, she thought, as she opened the door at the foot of the stairs and crossed the driveway to the dressing rooms. Doing his best to get back into his wife's good graces and making dates with his light o' love at the same time!

How weak men were, after all. Any woman who flapped her eyelashes at them could attract them and make fools of them. The strongest man was wax in the hands of the littlest woman, provided she had beauty and charm—provided that her eyes said "Follow me," and that her lips said "Kiss me!"

Monica was waiting for the three of them when they went up the steps to her little apartment at seven o'clock.

"I'm all ready!" she sang out gaily to them from the davenport where she was sitting, when Winnie, her new maid, let them in.

Monica's idea of being "ready" for any and all occasions was to have a shaker of cocktails mixed and chilling.

Bobbie looked around the apartment as she held her cocktail glass in her fingers. More and more, it showed signs of Monica's new wealth.

There was a hand-embroidered Chinese tapestry above the mantlepiece. Blue and scarlet and black and gold, it fairly blazed out from the wall against which it was hung. A wood fire flickered in the grate, and Monica had flung incense into the flames.

As She Spoke She Gave Ted a Narrow Look

There were orange and yellow Sweet bowls around the room, and they were filled with fresh violets and lilies of the valley. Bobbie wondered who had sent them to Monica. She knew she never had bought them. . . . Catch the close-fisted Monica spending money on anything as useless as flowers!

"They smell just like a funeral, don't they?" she asked as Bobbie put her face down to them, to breathe their delicious woodsy fragrance. "I just hate fresh flowers around the house. But Ted Piper sent them, so I couldn't throw them out."

As she said the last sentence she gave Her a narrow look, as if she wanted to see if the mention of Ted Piper's name would make him jealous.

Bobbie glanced at him, too. But he went on with his cocktail, and his face did not change.

"Good cocktail, Monica. Pour your uncle another," he said, holding out his glass to her. "Gosh, but it's nice and snug up here. What do you say to our going over to Mercatti's for some ravioli and cheese and fixings, and having a bite up here?"

But Monica shook her head with its blue-black scallops of hair, and her bright blue eyes and bare between lashes that were loaded with some kind of black oil.

"Not on your life, brother!" she cried. "I'm all dressed up to go out, and I'm going out. So just write that on your cuff!"

Roy laughed. "Yes, I can see that you're all dressed up," he said dryly.

Anyone, with half an eye, could have seen that. For Monica, in addition to what she called a "background" dress of this black chiffon, was wearing about six yards of large pink imitation pearls, a near-diamond brooch as big as a policeman's badge, a dozen or more thin gold bracelets set with colored stones, and about a half pound of rouge and powder.

"I hear that you're getting to be a great success," she said rather sourly to Bobbie. "I hear that Roy and Gus are just more than making you."

"Well, they've each given me a part in a picture, if that's what you call success," Bobbie answered her quietly, as she set her untouched drink down on the tea-wagon.

She had found out that drink didn't make her happy—that it didn't make anyone happy, but that it made most people sick and silly —and so she had stopped taking it.

"Of course, it's success," Monica said sneeringly. "But it won't last, so enjoy it now. I thought I had it a while ago, too. But Roy won't put me into any more pictures now that his wife's jealous of me."

She pushed the tea-wagon out of her way, and got up.

"Come on, Bobbie, while I put on my hat," she said, giving Roy a "mean" look that he didn't see. "It won't take me a minute."

Bobbie followed her into the little dressing room. Here, too, there were signs of sudden riches.

"That son-of-a-seacook in there," she said in her rough common voice, with a nod of her head toward Roy Schults, "thinks that he can come up here and have supper every night where his wife can't see him. And he can't! He'll either take me out in public, or he won't take me out at all, and I've told him so!" She snapped the buttons of her gloves viciously, and fixed an enormous beaded bag over her arm, and a great white fox scarf around her slender shoulders.

"There, now!" she said, looking at herself in the mirror, with great satisfaction, "I guess I'm all jake—except for some more lipstick." She added another finning touch to her mouth, and announced that she was ready to go out to dine before all Hollywood.

Monica's Eyes Were Like Blue Flame; She Spoke Coldly

"She looks just like a photograph of 'What the Well-Dressed Woman Will Not Wear in 1927,'" thought Bobbie, gazing at her from the rear as she followed her out into the sitting room.

Evidently Roy Schults thought something like that, too. For he said quietly:

"Do you think you need all those bead and bracelets, Monica? Won't they make you nervous?"

Monica's eyes were like blue flame. "No, they won't," she said coldly. "And let me tell you something, Roy Schults. I may not have any money or any education, but there's one thing I certainly do have—and that's style! So don't try to tell me how to dress!" And she sailed grandly out of the flat ahead of him, and teetered down the stairs on her high-heeled heels.

"Roy's begun to see his lady love as others see her," Gus remarked as he and Bobbie got into his dark-green car. "Did you ever notice that about people? They never begin to see each other's faults until they begin to fall out of love with each other."

Bobbie thought that ever all the way to the Montmartre restaurant, where they were going to have dinner. Why was she only beginning to wish that Gus wouldn't wear a watch-bracelet, and a flashy ring on his little finger? Why was she beginning to wish that he wouldn't pay quite so much attention to his clothes—as much attention as a girl would pay to hers? Why did she find herself wishing that he wouldn't carry around a little pocket comb for his blonde mustache, and that he wouldn't smirk when girls tried to flirt with him on the street?

Why did she notice all these little faults that really shouldn't matter to her? Could it be that she was falling out of love with him, now that she finally had got herself engaged to him?

"Oh, no!" she told herself firmly, as they drove up before the restaurant where so many famous people have entered and eaten and gone away. "I'm just getting to Know Gus. That's all—I care for him just as much as ever I did!"

It was true that she no longer lay awake nights, wondering where he was and worrying about him. But then that didn't mean anything. She had to get the proper amount of sleep, now that she was actually playing in pictures. Nothing made a girl look old and puffy around the eyes like losing her sleep.

She clung close to him, as they went up the thickly-carpeted steps that led to Montmartre, telling herself that she was the luckiest girl on earth, and only half believing it.

She sat down to the table, between Roy and Monica, to a dinner that was to be more amusing than any vaudeville, not she had ever witnessed.

A Peek Into Tomorrow

DRAWN BY
Nell Brinkley

TODAY'S FLAPPER PEEKS INTO THE FUTURE, SHOCKS EVEN HER, THEN AGAIN, IT MAY COME TO THIS INSTEAD!

OLD FATHER TIME might—in fancy—take he might—make a little tear in the impenetrable wall that stands between us and what is coming tomorrow, and invite a fellow to take a peek through! If he should do this and let us see the fashions, the mode, of three or four years from now—ONE year isn't likely to be enough, though sometimes it's plenty!—just as we will see them then! If he should! What would have grown out of the usual garb of today's maiden — and grandma, too, here and there—would mayhap shock even today's gay young thing! If we can go at all on what we have with us today. And what we had last year. When we thought the bottom of the sea was high, it sang out "High! Pooh! Watch me." And we found it meant to go on up—not DOWN. Hats got as small as we could wear them—and highly satisfactory, and pretty, and Robin Hoodish they were, too. Bigger hats once tried to crash in and fling the little rogues out. Remember? Where are the big brims now? Remember—they were as small as we could wear them. But they got smaller! Now they are shrinking right off of us. And gay, maiden youth is still wearing them.

Three years from now, two, or even one, if she feels like it, little youth may be going in Tartar boots, a Cossack head-piece and a fur coat to her heels!

'Forbidden Lips'; May's Warning

aching weight. "But you don't understand, May dear. I don't encourage him. . . ."

Infinite sadness was in the blue eyes. "I didn't encourage him, either—" The voice was a whisper. "It reminds me of a wolf, but he weaves nets—like a spider. With me it was years ago. I was new like you are. And I thought nothing could happen in a girl like me. You don't know him yet—he stops at nothing."

One of May's hands, small and rounded, with pink nails, stole out and gripped one of Jacqueline's in warning, a plea, an urge was in the pressure of the warm little clasp—something of fear.

"Promise me you'll never let him know I tipped you off? I—I wouldn't wouldn't be safe—if he knew."

Jacqueline felt the color draining away from her own face. "I didn't know things could be . . . that bad."

"Things . . . I couldn't tell anybody." Starkness in the blue eyes. "I could kill him—only . . ."

"You love him?" Jacqueline said mechanically.

"Not love . . . maybe it's fear; something that rules your mind. He's had me licked and hanging on the ropes. God knows I'd break loose if I could. . . ."

Gradually, as molten metal becomes hardened, the steel core in Jacqueline Kay's heart solidified; her fingers tightened on the soft little hand she held.

All of a sudden Jacqueline knew she was going to quit Lupino and the Sea Shell.

The decision came to her almost without warning, without mental effort. In some mysterious way the girl May had aroused the dormant instinct of self-preservation . . . cold terror more paralyzing than anything she had ever felt before, began to creep over Jacqueline and she knew that the time had come to act. This meant the sacrifice of her chance in Lupino's musical comedy . . . the breaking of her word to stay with him until after his trial.

But the premonition of disaster overpowered every other consideration. And it had come on her so suddenly.

"I'm going to get out . . . tonight," she said, "Do you want to go with me, May?"

The hand in Jacqueline's own quivered and jerked. "It's too late for me. You wouldn't understand, dearie . . . nobody could."

The jingling of a bell from out in the cafe, the sudden barbaric blare of a trumpet. Swiftly, the white form, with its fragmentary beads and spangles, vibrated with an automatic gathering of energy. "That's my dance."

Slowly, like something being fashioned in wax, the artificial beauty of the little face took preliminary form of a theatrical smile. Again the blare of the trumpets, and the slow premonitory growl of the drums.

The door swung open, and Jacqueline glimpsed the great outside room dyed with a flood of purplish blue light that colored everything and everybody with dusky, unnatural hues. The polished dancing floor surrounded by tables, was a dull, murky pool blotted with deep, heavy shadows.

For a moment the dancer paused, her body swaying, catching the rhythm of the savage beat and then, with undulating jungle trend, she glided into the indigo sea, which, all at once, stained the whiteness of her flesh to a strange, exotic darkness. As the door closed behind her, there came to Jacqueline's nostrils the dry, sweet scent of talcum, an impalpable mist that floated in the trail of the supple form.

Very deliberately, Jacqueline got to her feet; from a little blue wooden hanger she disengaged her long cloth coat with its silvery grey fox collar. This was the end . . .

Somebody—one of the girls—said with surprise, "What's the matter? Where are you going so early?"

"Home."

Tom Wave, she knew, would be at his own apartment a couple of floors further up. In her coat pocket, the card on which he had written his address and telephone number. She would phone him from the nearest corner cigar store, would make him come and get her in his car and take her home—she wanted, desperately, a sense of security, the safety, of his soul-satisfying companionship.

Disappointment came to her over the wire . . .

"You're pretty dosen't answer," the voice of the telephone operator sold. Tomorrow—Julius catches Jacqueline in the street.

RE-ENACTED

By Merlyn Swift

PARRYSH BLAINE left the fine, silky sand trickle over his knees [illegible] was [illegible] from the sun of mid afternoon. Blue waves [illegible] at his feet. Purposely he had come to this deserted cove along the beach at Sorrento. He wanted solitude.

For six months, since the tragic death of Christian Bieder, his niece and ward, Blaine had kept himself surrounded by friends. He had haunted the places of light and movement, where he had no time to look into his own soul and plumb its dark depths. At first the white, terrified face of Christian had tried to haunt him. . . . At the banquet table, the ball, the club, but his allies, his friends, with jest and laugh, drove it away. Only in the long hours of the night was he alone, but he always managed to so tire himself, or so steep himself in wine that her image could not peer at him from the shadows and keep him awake.

Christian Bieder had fallen from the cliffs at Smedlett. Perhaps, mercifully it had been given her to die before she had reached the green rocks five hundred feet from the brow. No one knew that; no one knew that Parrysh Blaine had refused to help her when her frail fingers were making a gripping from the crumbling edge. Calmly he had watched her, his lips twisted with the force of the awful temptation, he decided to so readily. Her cries, her pleading, he did not heed. They were soon stilled.

Accident. The police, the friends of Christian and Parrysh Blaine never questioned the nature of her death. There was no motive to awaken suspicion of crime. Blaine and his ward had been as intimate, seemingly, as father and daughter. They often strolled along the path by the cliff-side. Blaine's explanation was simple and plausible; a windy day, a treacherous, deceptive spot where the grass grew high over the edge, a gust that lifted Christian's hat, a lunge after it . . . and she was over. It was a fair explanation; who would question it in the face of her guardian's patheic regret, a grief fought down with tortured effort?

The large estate left by Christian was added to Blaine's fortune; he was her only relative. Of course, folk said, her money could mean little to him. For years he had practiced law successfully; his own holdings were a nice nest egg from the gambling edge. Calmly he had watched her, his lips twisted with the force of the awful temptation, he decided to so readily. Her cries, her pleading, he did not heed. They were soon stilled.

And Blaine was a man who loved life, those of its pleasures which one could enjoy best with the means of wealth. Almost dispassionately he had planned to remove from his path the young girl, a frail obstacle easy to overcome. A push, sudden and violent, and he had sent her over the edge of the abyss. Her clutching fingers had snatched at the grass and shrubs. Her birdlike strength had held her long enough for him, if he willed, to have saved her. But he had smiled—a twisted, diabolical smile.

When the days of well-feigned lamenting were over Blaine went far away. In Paris, Monte Carlo, Biarritz along the Riviera he lost himself to any consonance that might have accused him. He picked up gay companions. He shunned the gloomy aspects of life and dreaded to look upon violence as a man threatened with blindness fears to read in obscure light.

Though successful in putting down the memory that would have driven some men to insanity, he felt the dominating power of the crime upon his life. He fled, though he did not know it, from a spectre. He lost himself down alleys of laughter, in great halls of light. Always he was building barricades around him, frail bastions of mirth and conviviality.

He guarded another secret, confided to him by a grave-faced surgeon in Milan; his heart was weak. Undisturbed by rude shock it might function for many years to come. But he must be careful.

He was careful. More tenaciously now that his own firm grip was weakening he clung to life. Lying on the sands at Sorrento, warm, filled with a sense of well-being, able to go alone and free from remorse, he loved life. Oh, yes, he would take care. He would live in tranquil surroundings such as these, sheltered from unkindly jolts by his wealth. What could touch him?

He smiled. Idly he lifted his eyes from a tall cone of sand he had built and gazed around him. Sea, sky and, behind him, the rugged cliffs. No sign of life, unless that bit of white, the sail of a fishing boat, or that daub of black from a steamer's funnel, could be called life. Even the birds that lived in the rocky series were still. How secure he felt. It would be always so. Yet he hungered for a touch of life. And alone and guilty he as easy prey to fear. Perhaps with his binoculars . . .

The fishing-boat, the steamer were too far away to be discernible even with the powerful glasses. Blaine squirmed around and trained them on the cliffs, slowly sweeping their brow. Ah, there was someone!

Blaine's shoulders stiffened, set rigidly. The binoculars seemed part of him; yet, could he have done so, he would have dashed them away. Vivid as on a screen he saw a picture framed in the merciless lenses. Hitch up on the cliff stood a man and a girl. The girl, young, dressed in white with a bonnet of straw hanging by a dark ribbon from her arm . . . a girl strangely like Christian. The man was older. She was struggling in his arms. Christian had not fought like that. It was not easy to force it's one over. Back and forth, back and forth . . . would it ever end! There . . . she was over. Like Christian she managed to twist her fingers in the grass and cling, cling desperately. But she would slip. She must slip. Hideous act . . . the man placed his heel upon her hand and crushed it with all his weight.

A few days later the home papers carried a short time

Parrysh Blaine, well-known lawyer, was found dead on the sands at Sorrento. Death was caused by disease of the heart. The body was discovered by some motion-picture actors who had been shooting a scene on the cliffs during the afternoon.

AFTER PERIOD OF TORTURE, MAN FINDS RELIEF FROM ITCHING

Skin now entirely healed

Charlestown (Boston), Mass., Dec. 18:—"Last June I had an itchy irritation on my back, principally between the shoulders, and also on the back of my hands, extending to the shoulders. The skin was apparently clear of any disorder, but the itching was intense. After a vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel there would appear two spots, about an inch apart, which bled from the effects of the rubbing. I used Bay Rum and other lotions before I tried your Resinol Ointment. At bedtime my back received a thorough washing with Resinol Soap and a very generous application of Ointment, after which I would rest quite comfortably until about two or three in the morning, when I received another application. A third upon arising would be enough to make me feel at ease during the day. Thanks to the above treatment, the trouble is now entirely healed." (Signed) John W. Matthews, 4 Crystal Place.

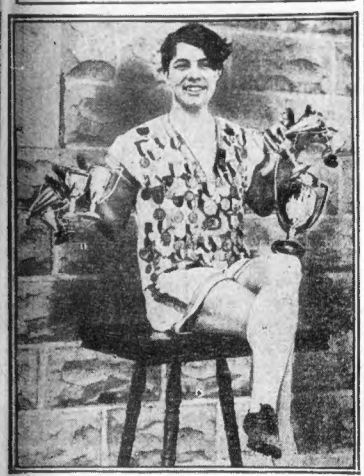
NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

Very Well Built

The Lady Should Be MARRIED



BEST GIRL ATHLETE IN AMERICA, MISS KATHERINE MEARLS, OF BOSTON

This charming, well-built Boston young lady can do almost anything in the way of athletics. You see her here wearing a few of her medals and holding some of the cups she has won. She has been victorious in swimming, basketball and many other branches of sport. Her chest is deep and wide, hips straight, neck powerful, face cheerful. She has everything that a good girl and good athlete should have.

But all of that, in the eyes of old Uncle Sam, is comparatively unimportant. He would say to her, "My daughter, don't waste too much of your time, youth or energy on swimming or racing."

GET MARRIED TO A GOOD MAN.

Select one that is KIND-HEARTED. That leads to happiness.

Select one as intelligent as possible. That means a better generation to follow this one.

Get one with a good, big FRONT head and a good, strong BACK head, a clear blue eye or an honest brown one, if you prefer brown.

Don't look for muscle or championship cups or medals. You have got enough of those things for two.

You will be a good mother. Good luck to you and to the fortunate young man that gets you.

Congress Should Act

An Effective Anti-Lobby Law Is Needed at Washington; Massachusetts and Wisconsin Label the Lobbyists

Pressure on the last Congress by the electric power trust to prevent the passage of the Boulder Dam bill, with the halls of the Capitol swarming with paid lobbyists, shows the necessity of an effective anti-lobby law. The chief legislative lobbyist of the giant power trust was bold enough to proclaim that the Boulder Dam bill "could not and would not" pass Congress unless amended to suit his employers.

The difficulty of framing desirable anti-lobby legislation has been recognized in Congress. It must consider the legitimate rights of American citizens to petition Congress and to present their views to that body.

The right of Congress to pass legislation that will publicly mark all paid lobbyists, making their business known to Congress and to the public, is beyond question.

Massachusetts and Wisconsin both have effective anti-lobby laws. Both require the registration of all persons engaged as counsel or agents before the Legislature of those States, together with the registration of the names of their employers, the residence of each, and all details that place them squarely on record.

Wisconsin goes further than Massachusetts in an attempt to prevent "log rolling" among members of the Legislature—that famous process by which legislators agree that "if you will help me roll my legislative log through the legislative rapids I'll help you roll your log through."

The Massachusetts law forbids legislative counsel and agents from admission to the floor of the Senate chamber, to the reading-room, cloakroom, the reception-room, corridors or ante-rooms while the Senate is in session.

The Wisconsin law forbids the privileges of the floor of either body to any person employed for pecuniary consideration to oppose or favor legislation.

Duly registered counsel and agents may appear before all committees, but they are, of course, already labeled as such by registration upon suitable dockets, open to the public at all times.

The Massachusetts law requires every paid counsel or agent to render, within 30 days after the close of a session of the Legislature, "a complete and detailed statement, on oath, of all expenses incurred or paid" in connection with his employment.

If States can minimize the evils of lobbying, the Congress of the United States can do so and SHOULD do so.

The freedom with which lobbyists work in the halls of Congress is a national disgrace.

Take the masks off the lobbyists, and label them.

GOOD HIGHWAY IS GOOD ADVERTISING

By DR. FRANK CRANE

OUT in California the Senate Committee on Revenue and Taxation approved by a significant and almost unanimous vote of ten to one, the proposition to complete the highway system of California.

This is to be done by levying an extra one cent in the gasoline tax. The revenue from this source is estimated at ten millions of dollars a year and will be devoted exclusively to new highway construction.

Other Federal aid sources and additional funds bring the total appropriation up to nearly $120,000,000.

California notoriously has a magnificent system of highways. The climate is favorable to good roads. It is certainly a lure for the tourists.

California therefore is sensible when by a small tax upon every gallon of gasoline it can perfect and improve its already admirable highways.

As has been said, one of the things that attract the tourist to California is the fact that he can always go out in the open air. He is reasonably sure to get brilliant sunshine, but good roads are indispensable.

In addition to this, however, good roads develop the agricultural community. They enable the farmer to get his crops quickly and cheaply to market and increase the value of his farm.

One of the greatest comforts in living in the country is a well-paved highway over which one can go to the city or take his goods to the market.

There is no alternate freezing and thawing in California such as breaks up the roadways in the East. One can travel for hundreds of miles over a highway as smooth as a floor. Undoubtedly it is such roads that attract many tourists to this State.

As a mere form of advertising, therefore, the good highway is valuable.

Recent reports have shown that the tourist crop in California is worth more to the State than all its imports and exports, and whatever encourages tourists ought to be furthered.

The scenery is magnificent in the Pacific Rockies and on the Pacific Coast and if the roads are perfect by which the scenery may be viewed, it is certainly a lure to the tourist.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

SOMETIMES the way is far from clear and puzzled, ill at ease, I go, sometimes the prospect seems but drear, hope dies and dull despair I know. But when, just at the darkest hour, the load seems more than I can stand, when I have spent each ounce of power, then someone comes to lend a hand. Oh, someone speaks a kindly word that is the very word I need, or does I find my pulses stirred by someone's little friendly deed. Someone may bring a vase of flowers, someone will sing a joyous song, and lo, the burden of the hours is lifted for the whole day long! And so the sum of all this good, these kindly gestures, day by day, will vanquish every cruel mood, will drive my fret and care away. Someone will white-ite down the street, someone will write a cheery line, and straightway all the fears retreat from out these sunlit paths of mine.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

DANCES

"BABE LEVIAS, vice-president of Boston Swimming Association, and one of the most competent athletic managers in the East, has added dancing to his accomplishments. Until a year ago he did not care much for this pastime, being content with his exercise as a swimmer and fancy diver, but now he is an ardent follower of Terpsichore. "Babe" does not expect to miss a single dance on the program at the annual outing of the Swimming Association in Carver this Spring.

BATHS.

The drinking fountains in the city parkway along lower Commonwealth avenue have been commandeered as bird baths by the sparrows that infest that section. Because they are sufficiently hollowed to care for the extra flow of water when persons seek coldness, these fountains constitute perfect baths for birds. The sparrows are not slow to fly up and bathe immediately after humans leave the fountains.

TIME

A clock that never is allowed to stop, gift of lodge friends more than a year ago, is the prized possession of TOM DUGGAN, ARLINGTON Elk and prominent in the New England plumbing supply industry. The timepiece adorns the wall in the QUINCY branch of a company where Tom became manager last Spring. Between DUGGAN and AL SWANSON, able assistant, not a minute has been lost by the token in speeding time on its way. Though it was presented on April 1, no joke was intended, according to DICK POWERS, exalted ruler of ARLINGTON lodge and other friends in Elkdom. "We want to keep him reminded it's time to think of his friends," is the explanation of the BROTHER BILLS.

SLEPT ON.

ALLSTON BURR, BOSTON banker and director of Boston Metropolitan Chapter, American Red Cross, doesn't like to be disturbed early in the morning. While on his way to Memphis, Tenn., to attend a meeting of associated Harvard clubs he declined to arise at 3 a. m. when the train on which he was riding was swishing through six inches of Mississippi flood water at Cairo, Ill. One of the few who did get up to view the spectacle was DEAN CLIFFORD MOORE of HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

IS your High School youngster driving you about crazy with demands for money and clothes? Here's a plan which has worked in several families. Maybe it will work in yours.

The Smiths have four children — Betty, who's in High School, and three little tads. Dave Smith earns around $250. They own their own home but even at that they have to stretch every dollar to make it cover.

Betty's a good kid, but you know how it is with High School girls these days. A thousand demands their mothers never dreamed of. They had some pretty lively rows about it at first. Mother nagged. Dad roared.

"Silk stockings! Marcelai Party dresses! Patent leather pumps! Movie money!" they chorused indignantly. "Why do you think you are, young woman—a crown princess? You seem to forget your father's a working man. Why, when we were young—"

"When you were young they didn't have such things, so of course you didn't want them," cries Betty. "You make me tired, both of you. You talk just as if I was trying to be mean. You don't stop to think that maybe things are harder for me just as they are harder for you. It costs more to go to school just as it costs more to run houses now. You never think of my side of the question."

Square Shooters.

Most parents would have seen only the impudence in that speech and have been resentful. But the Smiths are square shooters with their youngsters. hey saw that there was some justice in what Betty said. She wasn't just a selfish, greedy kid. If she was pushing them it was because circumstances were pushing her. Kids have a position to keep up just as their elders do. Yes — there was a lot to be said on Betty's side, too.

So they sat down and talked it over with her. This is what they said in substance:

"Here's what we earn, Betty. Here's what we spend on you now. You claim you need a little more. All right, we're going to squeeze out every cent we can possibly give you. You have a right to that as our child, and you can see for yourself that you're getting a generous share of the whole income. Now you claim that if you could do your own buying you could dress yourself much better than we dress you. You say you know more about what girls need than your mother knows. All right, then, we'll admit it. So here's the plan:

"You want money—so we'll give you all we can spare. You want to spend that money yourself. We'll let you do that. But, remember—FROM THIS DAY ON YOU MUST CARRY THE RESPONSIBILITY FOR THE SPENDING OF THAT MONEY.

100 Per Cent. Job.

"If you're going to be your own boss you must do a 100 per cent. job.

There's to be no borrowing from mother—no asking for help. If you make a bad buy you must abide by it. If the fashionable clothes you prefer wear out sooner than your more practical ones have done, you must do the mending. It's up to you, girl."

That's the plan the Smiths tried. It was more than a sensible budgeting of expenses—as a matter of fact, it cost them no more than they were already spending. But it was a subtle and powerful appeal to Betty's pride, AND IT WORKED. When that money became Betty's money she took an interest in it she had never taken before and she was immeasurably more cautious in spending it. She made some blunders at first, and kid like, tried to welch on her bargain and borrow a little extra from mother. But Mrs. Smith stuck by her guns and Betty wore her faded silks and trashy shoes through to the bitter end. And she knew better next time.

That scheme saved one family's happiness.

How about trying it?
